DISPATCH FROM GEN. MARCY.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, WHEATLAND, Nov. 2—9 P. M.

Mr. Secretary the President:

I have just received a dispatch from Gen. McCLELLAN, dated at Snicker's Gap, 4 P. M., stating that he has full possession of the Gap. When Gen. HAZEN entered there it was held by the enemy's cavalry, who were at once driven out by a column of troops, five to six thousand infantry. The rebels advanced to retake it, but were dispersed by the fire of our rifled guns. The position is a strong one from either side. It is said that Gen. JACKSON and Gen. A. P. HILL are in the valley opposite.

Gen. PLEASONTON had driven the enemy's cavalry several miles beyond Union at 3 o'clock this afternoon, capturing one of their colonels, and capturing five of their wounded left behind.

A. E. MARCY, Chief of Staff.

SPECIAL DISPATCH FROM HARPER'S FERRY.

HARPER'S FERRY, Sunday, Nov. 2.

I left the advance at 2 P. M. to-day, near Unionville, twenty-six miles off, driving the enemy in fine style.

The advance force under Gen. PLEASONTON broke camp on Friday morning at Purcellville, reaching Philomont, six miles distant, at 10 o'clock, immediately after the enemy had left. All the citizens, twenty-six in number, were arrested—their hot flying the oath being held. Pickets were thrown out in all directions.

Three rifled batteries were opened on a squadron of the Eighth Pennsylvania Cavalry, picketing toward that place. Our guns immediately got into position. Our crew and the rebel cavalry disappeared, and fought on foot. The whole of the Eighth Regiment went to the support, and the fight became animated.

Our men held a position in the wood one hour and a half against a superior force of the enemy. We then fell back, the rebels following. Our guns immediately opened on them, doing splendid execution, and driving them from every chosen position.

During the night they advanced into an orchard close by, and this morning, at one o'clock, Gen. PLEASONTON opened fire. BOCHERAN'S Brigade moved forward and drove the enemy from field to field, over three miles, capturing several prisoners, who said we were fighting all of STUART'S Cavalry; also, that LONGSTREET is at Paris, JACKSON at Upperville, and the bulk of the rebel force on the east side of the Blue Mountain.

A battle is expected to-morrow.

SPECIAL DISPATCH FROM SNICKER'S GAP.

SNICKER'S GAP, via WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 3.

Snicker's Gap was occupied by our forces yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock—HAZEN'S Division entire holding it until night, when SYKES' took its place.

The rebels were evidently rallied, intending to hold Snicker's and Ashby's Gap, and give us battle. They were hurrying up on the other side to take it when we entered. We threw shell among their forces, who wheeled and retreated on the double-quick.

Maj. O'HARE, of MEADE'S Staff, was captured, and afterwards retaken.

All the people, as well as the soldiers, were very much taken by surprise at our appearance.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

SNICKERSVILLE, NEAR SNICKER'S GAP, Sunday Evening, Nov. 2.

Our troops advanced to this place without meeting with the enemy. The Gap is now in our possession.

During the day considerable shelling was heard at the left and in the advance, which was feeling its way. The woods were thoroughly shelled, but no copping were elicited from the enemy. This morning, the enemy's pickets were on the mountain to the right of Snicker's Gap, but they disappeared as our forces approached this place.

OUR SPECIAL ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTER FROM THE ADVANCE.

The Movement Toward Snicker's Gap—A Description of the Country—A View of the Valley Between Short Hills and the Blue Ridge—Position of the Enemy—A Surprise in Store for Them—Prospect of Warm Work.

SNICKER'S GAP, on the Road from Bluemont to Snicksville, Sunday, Nov. 2, 1862.

There is every prospect that before this note reaches you an encounter with the enemy will have taken place at Snicker's Gap, situated pleasantly in sight from the location of the present writing. The "Short Hills," as you will observe from any good map of this region, form a spur of the Blue Ridge, parallel to which it runs southward for ten miles, when it breaks off abruptly, a valley from two to three miles in width rolling between the two ridges. Six miles south by west of the abutment of the Short Hills is the break through the Blue Ridge known as Snicker's Gap, and through figures the fine road leading to the Leesburgh and Salisbury Gap turnpike—the highway to Winchester and the Shenandoah Valley.

This Gap the rebels now hold in some force—having seized and began fortifying it the moment our army crossed the Potomac and entered Loudoun County. To get a good view of the locality, and see for myself what the prospect was, I this morning set out from Wheatland, in company with Capt. FRANCE, of the Signal Corps. Passing through Hillsborough—which you will observe is so in a break in the lower portion of the Short Hills—my guide saw way up the southern bank of this range. The ascent presents a very precipitous aspect, up which it would be impossible for any animal less agile than the canny, or nimble-footed climbers of the human kind. Accordingly, we left our horses at the convenient picket post at the foot of the hill and began the ascent on foot. The face and top of the mountain is thickly wooded, through which run even a fresh trail paths, and we had to trust to our pocket compasses for the right direction. As we were hoping our lives, and it was impossible to say at what moment we might be brought face to face with the cheerless outposts of the enemy, it was necessary for us to step reflectively along, avoiding the dry leaves that strew the ground, and stepping on the moss-covered rocks. Gaining the top of the mountain and climbing up and into a high tree, with four powerful glasses, the valley between the Short Hills and the Blue Ridge, together with Snicker's Gap, and the country surrounding, was by turns our array, lay at our feet.

Of course the most interesting locality was the Gap itself about five miles distant, and we strained our sight to see all we could here. The enemy was plainly in sight in considerable force, occupying both sides and crests of the Gap, and throwing skirmishers through Snickersville, South along the Eastern Side of the Blue Ridge down to Ashby's Gap and thence East to Upperville. PLEASANTON's reconnoissances have developed the fact that LONGSTREET's whole corps, numbering about twenty thousand men, occupy this locality. We observed numerous camp fires in the Gap, and comparing them with the fires from our own camps in sight in the vicinity of Hillsborough and Wheatland, it was evident that at least several divisions were located there. A strong force of artillery was also observed fringing the sides and crests of the Gap.

While engaged in our observations through our glasses, from the edge of vantage afforded us by the tree-top, we observed a large force of Union troops, the whole or part of CROUCH'S Second Army Corps, we assumed, moving south down the valley, between the Short Hills and the Blue Ridge. Having advanced to a line parallel with the end of the former range, they drew up in line of battle and skirmishers were thrown out up the mountain to the west. In front of the position of the main body lay a piece of woods, and beyond this, on the brow of the hill, a cleared space. In this opening we observed the enemy's videttes, who, however, from the intervening woods, were not visible to our people. Receiving aware of the approach of our skirmishers, they retreated towards the top of the Blue Ridge, where we observed a body of mounted men on the skirt of the woods. No infantry or artillery, however, was observed. Our forces now began moving southward and westward up the mountain sides; but after a short time a halt was made, and it was evident they were about to bivouac for the night. If we rightly conjecture, the information intended by our force is a skilful one, and one that will go far to take the rebels in the gap by surprise. They will move along the road on the brow of the mountain, and moving southward will turn the enemy's flank, repeating on them the game they practiced upon our forces at Harper's Ferry.

These predictions, you will observe, are made on the presumption that the enemy intends holding the Gap. It is possible, however, that they may prudently withdraw—a course to which they will be the more led, as there is every probability they have already derived all the benefit they wished to have from the possession of the Gap—namely, a cover for their retreating forces up the Shenandoah Valley, for I am every day confirmed in the theory I have on several occasions advanced, that there will probably be no serious battle north of Manassas. If the rebels are determined to hold Snicker's Gap it may require some pretty warm work to take it from them, and it is within their power to make a second "South Mountain" out of it. When we first entered this valley the force then was insufficient, and might readily have been taken by a brigade of infantry, a squadron of cavalry, and a single battery. Now, it may cost many, many a brave fellow his life.

The theory that the rebels intend making a desperate resistance to the passage of our army south of the Manassas line, has just received fresh confirmation in the statement of a paroled Confederate soldier—a non-commissioned officer of the Second Virginia Cavalry, named C. H. COOPER, whom I met yesterday on his way back from Richmond to his home at Waterford, in this county. While at Warrenton Junction, on his way last Wednesday, enormous masses of troops were being sent from Richmond and Gordonsville by the Virginia Central and Alexandria Railroads, through Warrenton Junction, and on to Manassas. No less than fifty-two pieces of artillery were sent forward that day from Gordonsville to Culler's Station. If these are really the intentions of the enemy, shall we have a third Bull Run battle at that ominous locality this again Fall? or shall it go over to a Spring campaign? A few days will decide.

I have endeavored, all along, not to hold out any illusions as to our operations, and I still do not say we are going on to Richmond. But things look more like work now than they have thus far. Our powerful army continues to move—not exactly with Napoleonic rapidity; but still it moves. The soldiers are in fine spirits; activity has thrown off all the maggots that sloth breeds, roads and weather are fine and as favorable for work as they ever could be. Courage and daring should do a great deal for the cause during the next fortnight. W. S.

LETTER FROM SHARPSBURGH.

The Movement of Troops—Apprehensions of the People of Sharpsburgh—Arrest of a Clergyman for Signalling the Enemy, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SHARPSBURGH, Md., Wednesday, Oct. 29, 1862.

Preparations are making for the corps stationed near this place to move to-morrow. To-day, the officers are engaged packing their valises and trunks. Commissaries and Quartermasters have been notified to have their transports in readiness; single ambulances have been detailed to convey the sick from the regiments to the hospitals, and double ambulances to take the wounded and disabled from Sharpsburgh to Frederick. For the past ten days numerous orders have been issued, and then countermanded, for the corps to prepare for a sudden march, but it is universally conceded that the order of to-day will be acted upon, and to-morrow will behold the troops in motion.

The corps which left here last Sunday to circuit with the main army further down the river; the corps which leaves to-morrow will proceed in the same direction. The citizens of the place are fearful lest the rebels should again cross at Blackford's Ford when they observe that the army has moved away. It is not probable, however, that the rebels will repeat their attempt at invasion of Maryland soil, and invite our army to close upon them in the rear.

Rev. Dr. R. DESELLEM, an old resident of the place, was recently detected in communicating with the enemy at Shepherdstown. The traitor lives in a spacious brick house on a high bank near the river, from which point he conveyed signals. He was taken to Harper's Ferry, where it is to be hoped he will receive his desserts. Numerous traitors still remain in town, and are only awaiting a favorable opportunity to impart valuable information to the rebels.

No one can utter a word of complaint in reference to the humane treatment of the rebel wounded. Under the judicious and skillful management of that accomplished surgeon, Dr. J. H. RUSH, they have received the kindest and most considerate attention. They are also indebted to Dr. DE TERME, Manager of the Episcopal Church Hospital, and to Dr. C. D. WERTS, Assistant Surgeon in the same building. The latter gentleman has won the hearts of the patients, a number of whom, when being taken from the hospital this morning, expressed unbounded gratitude for his care and attentions. It is expected that Dr. WERTS will soon take a position in the navy.

The urgent praise cannot be awarded to Dr. RUSSELL A. CRAMER, Agent of the Sanitary Commission, for his untiring zeal in supplying the hospitals and Regiments and Brigades with clothing and hospital stores. For whose supplies the Surgeons have depended almost entirely upon the Sanitary Commission for articles of comfort and necessity for the sick and wounded. Thousands of delicacies worth of goods have been dispatched by this branch since its arrival here.

Gen. BURNSIDE's Corps took a parting leave of his Brigade yesterday, prior to his taking the command of a division. The regiments were drawn up in line, and each was reviewed separately by the General. At the conclusion of the review he rode up to the several commandants of the regiments, and, speaking each one in turn by his name, made his adieu. That accomplished patriot, Col. YORKSHIRE, of the Eighty-third Pennsylvania Regiment, approached the General, and presented him a pair of gold spurs, accompanying the same with a neat and very appropriate speech. The spurs are the gift of the Brigade officers of his brigade, and intended as a testimonial of their appreciation of his gallant conduct at the Battle of Hanover Court House. Gen. BURNSIDE made a feelingly response, after which the regiments marched to Antietam, regretting the loss of their late successful commander. WHIT.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 3.

THE NEW-YORK ELECTION.

A feeling of intense interest pervades all circles here in regard to the election to-morrow in New-York. Among unquestionably loyal men of all parties, the defeat of SEYMOUR and his anti-war associates is regarded as more important to the country than any victory which can be achieved on the field. The Administration with JAMES BUCHANAN, on the other hand, hardly take pains to disguise their extreme anxiety for the defeat of WADSWORTH, and the consolidation at the polls of the war for the suppression of the rebellion.

THE SEYMOUR PEACE PROPOSITIONS.

The rumors circulated in regard to the especial peace propositions from Richmond are entirely manufactured in the interest of SEYMOUR and WOOD, and designed to affect the election in New-York.

IMPORTANT DISPATCHES.

Mr. SEWARD was with the President most of the afternoon, discussing important dispatches.

VISITS TO THE PRESIDENT.

Until the meeting of Congress, the President will decline to receive incidental visits after 10 o'clock. The pressure of official duties makes this limitation necessary.

ARMY MATTERS.

It is certain that no serious engagement has taken place between the armies of McCLELLAN and LEE. The rebels seem to have sent out numerous parties to seize and hold the passes of the Blue Ridge, but our forces, so far as known, have experienced in dispersing them no great opposition. The belief is general that the enemy is falling back, and that SEWARD and other active leaders are covering the retreat.

THE REBEL ARMY UNDER LEE.

The statement from the Army of the Potomac, that the bulk of LEE's force is east of the Shenandoah Valley, is not believed by correspondents or commanders in front of Washington. Gen. SIGEL, in command, informs us, this evening, that he believes most of the rebel force lately at Winchester to have been withdrawn toward Staunton or Richmond.

THE RUMOR ABOUT MOBILE.

The story of the capture of Mobile is not at all credited at the Navy Department. Such an enterprise at this time is inconsistent with the Government programme, and quite unlikely to have been attempted.

THE SENATORIAL CONTEST IN PENNSYLVANIA.

It is generally conceded here that no other man has so good a prospect for election to the United States Senate, from Pennsylvania, in place of Mr. WILSON, as Gen. CAMERON, who is now understood to be on his way home from Russia. This prospect has excited the liveliest apprehensions among the Democrats in that State, and the most extreme measures are being resorted to, with a view of preventing a result so disheartening. Already, the secesh papers there are exhorting the people of the Egyptian districts arm, in anticipation of forcible resistance; and threats are freely made that no man elected to the Legislature as a Democrat, and who shall vote for CAMERON, shall be permitted to return to his home alive.

Altogether, politics in the old Keystone State seem rapidly drifting into a vortex of confusion and desperation.

THE INDIAN CAMPAIGN IN MINNESOTA.

Late information from Gen. SIBLEY's command in Minnesota, shows that his force has moved down to the Yellow Medicine River, to a point more convenient to his supplies. He is still engaged in trying and condemning Indians connected in the recent murders, and a general hanging is expected shortly to take place. So far, about thirty have been found guilty, and condemned to death.

GOV. CURTIN.

Gov. CURTIN arrived here in the early train to-day, and will return home to-morrow. His business related to military affairs, and had for a special object the promotion of harmony in the action of the National and State authorities. An interview of several hours, with the President, resulted in a complete restoration of friendly relations, which the late misunderstanding had somewhat impaired, and was productive of more practical views in regard to the draft, and the order of the War Office authorizing popular auxiliary for National service to be recruited from the volunteer regiments. No interview was had between the Governor and Secretary of War.

SENATOR COWAN ON THE DRAFT.

Considerable difficulty has arisen in Pennsylvania, growing out of an opinion given by Senator COWAN, that under the law drafted men could escape impressment by paying the forfeiture of not exceeding a year, and not less than a month, pay—the amount to be determined by the Court-martial. Whilst this might be construed as the interpretation of the law of 1862, the Act of 1861 is sufficiently explicit to the contrary to remove all doubt on this point, and the War Department has so rendered a decision.

CONVALESCENTS.

Three thousand soldiers were sent to-day, by rail, from the convalescent camp at Alexandria, to their respective regiments in the Army of the Potomac. More will follow this week.

SITE FOR A NAVY-YARD.

It is now stated to say that New-London has been selected as a site for a New-Yard by the Government. The Commission to examine and report on sites had an authority to make a location, and was divided between New-London, Philadelphia, and Narragansett Bay. The whole question will be referred by Secretary WELLES to Congress. Longer Island, offered as a site for a Navy-Yard, is not yet accepted.

REVIEW OF GEN. CASEY'S DIVISION.

Gen. CASEY's Division will be reviewed this Wednesday.

PATIENTS COMING NORTH.

Twelve convalescent patients will be sent North to-day—eight hundred to Philadelphia, five hundred to New-York, and three hundred to Baltimore.

GEN. SUMNER.

Gen. SUMNER leaves to-morrow for the Army of the Potomac, to resume his command.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 3.

ENLISTMENT OF VOLUNTEERS IN THE REGULARS.

A special order from the Headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, just issued, is to the following effect:

Pursuant to authority from the War Department, all enlistments of volunteer artillery siddiers in the regular service, under General Order No. 154 from the War Department, Adjutant-General's Office, Oct. 8, 1862, are hereby declared void, and all such men will be forthwith returned to the batteries and companies from which they were taken; but all other enlistments under General Order No. 145 from the War Department, not in excess of ten from any volunteer company, are valid. After ten men shall have enlisted from any company, all further enlistments from that company into the regular service are void. All enlistments into the regular service, excepting from the volunteer artillery, now detained by regimental or show commanders, will be at once sent to the regular company or battery to which they belong, under General Order No. 154.

The ten men have been taken from any volunteer company, and there be still more men claimed from that company by regular officers as having been enlisted into their batteries or companies, the volunteer regimental commander will certify the fact to the effect that ten volunteers have been taken from the company, which will be a sufficient answer to the claim. The immediate delivery of volunteer artillery, recently enlisted to their new batteries or companies, is enjoined upon all commanding officers. Descriptive lists, and accounts of pay and clothing should be sent with the soldiers from transportation.

SENTENCE APPROVED.

The President has approved the sentence of a General Court-martial, convened at St. Augustine, condemning private WILLIAM W. LUSE, Company I, Ninth Maine Volunteers, to be shot to death for desertion to the enemy's lines, without arms and accoutrements, and for highway robbery.

HOSPITAL ACCOMMODATIONS.

Former orders have been modified so as to require the submission to the Secretary of War's plans for hospital accommodation of the sick only in cases which in the opinion of the Quartermaster-General or Surgeon-General require the special action of the Secretary.

A CHANGE IN THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

It is said to-night in military circles that Col. GARESCHE, Assistant Adjutant-General of the army, upon duty in the War Department, will soon leave here for duty in the field as Chief of Staff of Maj.-Gen. ROSECRANS, and that he will be succeeded by Col. JAMES B. FRY, at present Chief of Staff to Gen. BURNSIDE.

PAY OF THE SOLDIERS.

The entire army has been paid to the 30th of June last, and a portion up to the 31st of August. The reason for non-payment as to the remainder is owing to the Treasury Department being unable to honor the requisitions of the pay department, the bounty and advance pay to the new levies having to be first paid, and this transaction requiring all the available funds.

MILITARY AFFAIRS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Gov. CURTIN is here to confer with the President upon important military affairs connected with Pennsylvania.

THE RECENT BLOCKADE CAPTURES.

Rear-Admiral DUPONT, in communicating to the Navy Department the circumstances attending the capture of the British steamers Scotia, Anglia and Ouachita, and the destruction of the Mate, says:

"The crew of the Scotia were in a state of intoxication, so that they became almost unmanageable, and Acting Volunteer Lieut. CONNOR ordered them to be transferred on board the Restless and put in irons. The Anglia, when captured, was almost out of coal, and was sent by Capt. GOZOW, Senior officer off Charleston, to Port Royal, to be supplied. This is the same vessel which attempted to enter Charleston in September, and being headed off, succeeded in making her escape through the darkness."

NAVAL ORDERS.

Assistant Paymaster BURNS has been ordered to the iron-clad steamer Weehawken.

Assistant Paymaster PARKER to the Keokuk.

Acting Assistant Paymaster LONGSTREET to the bark Brazilliere.

Acting Assistant Surgeon GRIMES has been detached from the ship Gerard and ordered to the Kingfisher.

From Fortress Monroe.

ARRIVAL THERE OF A PORTION OF THE CREW OF THE BURNT SHIP ALLEGHANIAN.

FORTRESS MONROE, Saturday, Nov. 1.

The second mate and seven of the sailors from the burnt ship Alleghanian, arrived here to-day from Yorktown, under arrest. The crew numbered twenty men. These eight men were picked up by the gunboat Monticello, and taken to Yorktown. All the rest of the crew are missing. Nothing definite has been learned relative to the destruction of this ship, but the investigations, which will probably be made, and the examination of these men will, no doubt, throw the crime upon the right parties.

FORTRESS MONROE, Sunday, Nov. 2.

The flag of truce steamboat South America left Fortress Monroe, this afternoon, for Aiken's Landing, taking up about thirty rebel prisoners, which arrived here this morning on the Baltimore boat Georgiana.

Cannonading was heard up the James River last evening, about 10 o'clock. The cause is not ascertained.

Earthquake in Africa.

HAVANA, Monday, Nov. 3.

A letter from Acera, W. C. A., dated July 19, states that an earthquake occurred there on the 16th. Nearly every house in the town was destroyed, and the three forts are in ruins.

NEWS FROM THE REBEL STATES.

Advices from Richmond to the 30th ult.

The Capture of the Steamship Anglia, in Bull's Bay.

Prospective Operations in North Carolina.

Richmond papers of the 30th ult. contain several items of interest, which we reproduce. The Examiner says:

"Day before yesterday a Yankee gunboat came up the York River as far as West Point, making no stay, but gave notice that they intended to send up a large vessel to blockade the river and stop the rebel trade in oysters. They also say that the people on the Rappahannock River have not yet, tested the horrors of war, and they intend to pay them a visit shortly."

Friction matches sold in Richmond, 30th, at $11 50 per gross.

The Examiner says:

"We have been waited upon by several of the Surgeons who came up from Aiken's Landing on Tuesday, in charge of the wounded paroled prisoners, and from their statements of neglect and treatment at that point, it would seem that the sufferings of Confederate prisoners only commence when released from Yankee thraldom. Their custody and care is transferred to those from whom they have a right to expect humane and better treatment. In the name of God, we hope to hear of no more such treatment."

A man in Richmond had been sentenced to wear a barrel shirt through the city, and then sent to hard labor in the fort for six months, for smuggling liquor into the city.

The Examiner says the wagon train of supplies brought out from Kentucky by Gen. KIRBY SMITH, were forty miles long, and brings a million yards of Kentucky jeans, with a large amount of clothing, boots and shoes, and 300 wagon loads of bacon, 6,000 barrels pork, 15,000 mules and horses, 5,000 beeves, and a large lot of hogs.

THE CAPTURE OF THE STEAMSHIP ANGLIA.

The Examiner contains the following dispatch:

CHARLESTON, Oct. 28, 1862.

Tidings reached here this evening of the capture, in Bull's Bay, of the steamship Anglia, laden with valuable army stores, bound to this city. When the Anglia left Nassau, news had been received that the Yankees were working night and day on iron-clads, with a view of attacking Charleston soon.

DANGER IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Raleigh Express says: "There are many considerations which make it necessary that the Government shall take prompt and energetic measures to hold against the enemy the eastern portion of North Carolina. The people of this section are already alarmed at the prospect of being overrun by the enemy, are said to distrust the intention of the Government, and to be making preparations to remove their slave property to safer quarters. The Neuse river is navigable, at a high freshet, for boats drawing four or five feet of water, to Smithfield, within twenty miles of Raleigh. It would be improper to say what has already been done to close this and the Tar rivers."

THE FIGHT AT POCOTALIGO.

From the Richmond Dispatch, Oct. 31.

In the fight at Pocotaligo, it appears that the enemy's force consisted of detachments of eight regiments, from Pennsylvania, New-Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Each detachment numbered 400 men, so that the attacking force of infantry consisted of about 3,200 men, besides which there was a full battery of field-pieces and two boat-howitzers. These troops were commanded by Brig.-Gen. TAGGART. Having effected their landing at an early hour and driven in our pickets, the Yankees advanced rapidly towards the railroad. The Charleston Mercury says:

They first encountered our forces about 11 o'clock A. M., and the fighting was kept up with more or less spirit from that time until 5 o'clock P. M., when the enemy began to waver and finally fell back in disorder, leaving his dead upon the field. The action is described by an eye-witness to have been a second Secessionville affair, in the disparity of the forces engaged, in the stubborn character of the contest and in the completeness of the repulse. Capt. ESTEOTE's Battery and the Virginia Battery are said to have covered themselves with glory. A later report, though not official, places the number of our casualties at 25 killed and 60 wounded.

The heaviest loss was suffered by the Virginia Artillery, Capt. J. N. LAMKIN, a gallant corps, which has served on our coast ever since the fall of Port Royal. They had four killed and sixteen wounded, most of the latter slightly. The following are the names of the killed: C. FRYER, J. F. FREEMAN, W. A. THAGNER, T. J. ALLEN. Lieut. MASLIN was wounded in the head and arm slightly. The battery went into action with thirty-five men. A large number of its horses were killed. The Old Dominion boys also lost a sixteen, owing to the horses having taken fright, but captured one from the enemy, which made things even. The enemy burned the caisson which they took.

The Courier adds the following to this account:

The Forty-sixth Georgia and a detachment of cavalry, under the command of Col. COLQUITT, were ordered down Thursday morning to follow up the enemy, on a courier having arrived, stating that the enemy was in force at Mackey's Point. The Georgians on the road gathered up quite a large stock of overcoats and other articles found on the road. Two new made graves were also discovered. The enemy's dead lie scattered along the route down to the point of landing. During the whole engagement they were carrying their wounded and dying to the rear. One man who saw them on their retreat states that he met a continued stream of ambulances going and coming from their boats. On their advance they had killed some sheep, but in the hasty retreat were obliged to leave their plunder.

Our troops buried forty of the enemy's dead. The force that met the enemy consisted of the Rutledge Mounted Riflemen, Capt. TRAPMOND; Charleston Light Dragoons, Capt. EVELEIGH; Beaufort Volunteer Artillery, Capt. WM. ELLIOTT, and an infantry company, who stubbornly and successfully contested the enemy's advance until the arrival of reinforcements. The others after word engaged were MEAGER's Virginia Battery, MORGAN's Squadron of Cavalry, Major ARMY's First Battalion of Sharpshooters, consisting of Capt. CAMERON's Company, Capt. ALEXANDER's Company, and Capt. BURT's Company.

A deserter from one of the blockading steamers off Charleston arrived in that city on the 27th. The Courier gives the following report from him:

Before he left, he was acting as Assistant Quartermaster, and overheard a conversation between Capt. DARRAGH and another officer on the poop-deck of his vessel, in which one of the officers stated that an attack on Charleston would be made on the arrival of two iron-clads and some additional vessels, with an expected reinforcement to the land forces of some seventeen thousand men. They expected to make the attack by land and water between the 1st and 15th of November. Their light-draft gunboats were to run up the Stono, shell the woods and attack the batteries along the banks, while the iron-clads and larger vessels are to come up and attack Fort Sumter and the city.

The President's Reply to the Appeal of the Ladies of New-York.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, Oct. 31, 1862.

MADAM: I have had the honor to receive and to present to the President of the United States the letter of loyal New-York women which you sent to me, together with a copy of their appeal to our countrymen which accompanied the same. I have also received the letter which was addressed to me by the same patriotic ladies.

I am authorized by the President to express to you his grateful appreciation of the interest which the writers of these communications have taken in the National affairs. Their generous appeal in behalf of a country more worthy of women's affections than any other country could be, and much ennobled of their new home at any former period, has already been largely responded to. Armies have never been adequate, as the President trusts, to the National emergency, and at times that army of the National salvation shall be written, it will show that the heroic portion of patriotism which inspired it came, and in no small degree, from the virtue of the mothers of the Revolution.

I have the honor to be, Madam,

Your very obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

To Mrs. ——.

IMPORTANT FROM SUFFOLK.

ANOTHER BATTLE ON THE BLACKWATER.

THE TOWN OF FRANKLIN DESTROYED.

Correspondence of the Baltimore American.

HEADQUARTERS NEW-YORK MOUNTED RIFLES, NEAR SUFFOLK, VA., Nov. 1, 1862.

We have had another little exchange of compliments with the enemy on Blackwater, a few miles lower down the river from the position where the lamented WERTLAKE met a soldier's death.

At four o'clock on the afternoon of the 30th, detachments from six squadrons, numbering 300 men under Lieut.-Col. OSBORNE—our Colonel, C. C. Dodge, being absent on another important expedition with the rest of the regiment—left camp to report to Gen. PARK for instructions. On our reaching Suffolk, we found Gen. PARK's Infantry Brigade, HOWARD's United States Artillery Battery, and the Seventh Massachusetts Battery, all in motion, and Gen. EXRAS' Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, gone out. The troops proceeded to Franklin, on the Blackwater, moving on rapidly through the place, and opening the point opposite the place of [illegible]. Their pickets and our advance commenced firing at once, and as soon as possible, under cover of our advanced skirmishers, the batteries were placed in position and opened on the nest of rebels. They opened on their side with another battery, in short time, but our guns soon got the range, and, as we hear from them to make half a show. We shelled them out, knocked their town into pi, and, in short, we drove them, returned at a late hour last night to this camp. There were none killed and but few wounded on our side. Their loss, judging from yells and shrieks and consternation, as we drove them from cover, must have been severe. There is no food or forage on the Blackwater in that direction, and having no cavalry with us, we could not cross to follow them up. The expedition was a success, so far as enemies of all descriptions permitted.

We are anxious and ready for a move on to Petersburg, and know we can make it whenever Headquarters at Washington will permit it. Our Generals and our troops are anxious and ready for the cheering word, "Forward."

OUR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM PARIS.

The Changes in the French Ministry Favorable to the Pope—New the Changes Affect the American Question—Nothing for the Secessionists—Mr. Thouvenel due—The Reorganization Project Abandoned—Proposed [illegible]

PARIS, Friday, Oct. 17, 1862.

The journals for France and the clericals have triumphed. The anticipated change in the Ministry favorable to the Pope has taken place, and the friends of Italy are in despair. M. THOUVENEL, Minister of Foreign Affairs, who had in some sort engaged himself in the cause of Italian unity, and even, it is said, to a speedy evacuation of Rome, goes out because he finds that this is not the policy of the Emperor, and M. DROUYN DE L'HUYS, a former occupant of the office, takes his place. M. DE PERSIGNY, who, as well as M. THOUVENEL, warmly sustained the unitary cause in Italy and the early evacuation of Rome, it was supposed would also go out; but as Minister of the Interior, his only influence was in the control of the Press and a single vote in the Cabinet, and he was in no way responsible for the foreign policy of the Government. A change in his department would not have been an intimation of the tendencies of the Government in any foreign question, and it is not probable he will be changed. In the interest of the United States, M. DE PERSIGNY's resignation would be most desirable, for just as zealously as he works in the interest of union in Italy, does he work in the interest of disunion in America.

The change in the Foreign Office will not probably bring with it any change in the policy of the Government in American affairs. Our secession friends, it is true, are elated at the change, but their joy at best is only negative, and is based on the fact that M. THOUVENEL was strongly in favor of non-intervention, while the new Secretary cannot be, for them, any worse than that. But I am told that M. DROUYN DE L'HUYS is in principle in favor of non-intervention as our affairs, and so much so in fact, that even if non-intervention were not the only possible policy of the French Government, he would still favor that policy. He has already held the office of Foreign Secretary three times; twice under the Republic of 1848, and again from 1852 to 1855, at which latter epoch he resigned, on account of a disagreement of opinion with the Emperor, at the Peace Conference of Vienna of that year. He has always been regarded as a liberal in politics, and in his official relations with Former American Ministers, at the Court of the Tuileries, always showed a deferential appreciation of feeling toward the American Government, which, we have every reason to believe, he will continue to show. Even on Italian affairs, there is doubt whether the new Secretary has engaged himself any further than against the immediate evacuation of Rome, for it is impossible for a man of his antecedents to rush thus voluntarily into the arms of the Reactionary Party. A new title has been found for the party to which the Emperor belongs—"the party of hesitation." This word describes the whole position and policy of the French Government, as represented by the Emperor himself—hesitation, perplexity, procrastination, in the hope that something may turn up to extricate him from a difficulty which he has not the courage to boldly attack. If the Pope should die and Cardinal DE MERODE should be elected to the vacant chair, we might have some hope of a settlement; but, until the arrival of that event, there seems to be but little chance of a change in favor of Italy.

There is talk, however, within the last few weeks, of a wholly new and important feature in European politics—that is, not in order to title new feature that young people attach the postponement of the solution of Rome. According to this hypothesis, the Emperors of France and Russia, and the King of Prussia are negotiating for a reorganization of the territorial limits of Europe, on the basis of nationalities—a reorganization which, so far as it is understood to-day, is to unite Germany under one head, give Venetia and Rome to Italy, reconstitute Poland as a separate nationality, Hungary as an independent nation, and so on, the two Emperors taking, as compensation, the one the Danube provinces of Germany, and the other the provinces of the Danube. In such a territorial breaking up of Italy, the solution of the Roman question would be the smallest part of the programme.

The violent manner in which the Emancipation message of Mr. LINCOLN was received in the Confederate Congress has singularly enhanced the secession Press in this country. The hope and the cry of universal secessionism were that JEFF. DAVIS would take the first step toward emancipation, so as to counteract the effect of Mr. LINCOLN's proclamation. But the first debate in the Confederate Congress have served to dispel totally any hope of such a measure, and now the writers who are bound to defend the rebellion, no matter what takes place, are set down to face with a situation which they find exceedingly difficult to manipulate.

The Secession papers have thus broken argument to fall back upon denunciation and the publication of anonymous, and probably manufactured letters, from the North and South, full of falsehoods and absurdities, not which, if true, would show the American people to be possessed of a character of cruelty and tyranny not before suspected. In this persistent effort of the Secessionists to arouse sympathy for their cause, by representing their enemies as barbarians and tyrants, Mr. BUTLER, of course, heads the column, and we expect soon to hear the name of "Butler" used all over the world as a scare to unruly children. But the principal crime of Gen. BUTLER seems to be that he, a down-east Yankee pettifogger, had no business to take and hold the proud City of New-Orleans. If he could only see the editorial abuse which appears daily in the English and French papers, he would perhaps doubt his own identity. Certainly, since the world began, no man by no honorable a position has been so thoroughly abused.

Too publish in your Washington correspondence, and many American and European papers after you, a history of an interview said to have taken place between Mr. SLIDELL and the Emperor NAPOLEON. According to our information here, and I have already made this intimation in your paper, Mr. SLIDELL has never seen the Emperor at all. Nevertheless, there are here, as at home, many histories in circulation as to what should have taken place at this apocryphal interview, and among others, there is one told by the Secessionists themselves, which is too good to be lost. They say that after receiving, as is his custom, with imperturbability to the end of Mr. SLIDELL's explanations, the Emperor abruptly terminated the interview by saying, "Mr. SLIDELL, take my advice and return!"

Mr. [illegible], the Agent of the Cunard Company of Boston at New-York, states in your paper the statement I made in regard to the number of lives on the day said by crew of their steamer to British vessel, or [illegible], that the ship bore any [illegible], name or flag, was determined to be offered to the Government of the United States. That they often run in British waters flags that they dare not run in American waters. 2. That the officers of the Company in England in their relations with the public make no concealment of their sympathy with the rebellion; and 3d, That this Company furnished a sailing master (a Capt. ## NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The operations of the advance of the Army of the Potomac on Sunday resulted in a very important advantage to the National arms in the capture of Snicker's Gap—a strategic point of the first magnitude. This success is announced in a dispatch from Gen. Marcy, Gen. McClellan's Chief-of-Staff, to the President. Gen. Hancock's forces arrived there at 3 o'clock P. M., and found it occupied by the rebel cavalry, who were at once driven out by a column of from five to six thousand infantry. Hancock's Division held the Gap until night, when Sykes' Division took its place. The rebels, our special correspondent says, were evidently taken by surprise, and foiled in their intentions, which were to hold Snicker's and Ashby's Gaps, and to give Gen. McClellan battle with those advantages. They were marching up from the other side of the mountains to occupy Snicker's Gap when our forces entered it, but were turned back on the double quick by a few shots thrown among them. This movement was independent of Gen. Pleasanton's, who had, meantime, it will be recollected, driven the enemy's cavalry several miles beyond Union.

A correspondent of the Baltimore American gives an account of another sharp fight on the Blackwater River, below Suffolk, Va. Our troops proceeded to Franklin during the night of the 26th ult., and encountered the enemy's pickets at daylight. Their main body was soon afterward engaged, and after a brisk exchange of shot and shell, they were routed in confusion. The rebel losses were severe.

With regard to movements in Kentucky and Tennessee, both of the National and Rebel forces, the Cincinnati Inquirer, of the 1st inst., says: "We are credibly informed that the First Division, Gen. A. J. Smith, are in possession of Camp Dick Robinson and Nicholasville; Second Division, Gen. Granger, at Lexington; Third Division, Gen. Baird, at Williamstown and Winchester. Major-Gen. Granger, the Commander of the corps d'armée, has his headquarters in Lexington. An immediate forward movement of the three divisions has been ordered. The various corps d'armée under Gen. Rosecrans, are moving toward Nashville. It is reported that the rebels are fortifying Cumberland Gap, under Gen. Stevenson; that Bragg is moving on Nashville from the east, while a column, under Price, is moving on the same city from the west. The rebel army's combined effective force will reserve 100,000 troops. Gen. Negley's position would certainly be critical if these reports prove true. The Federal armies could not arrive in time, we fear, to save him from from being captured, with millions of dollars' worth of arms, stores, &c. Another report has it that Bragg, with his entire army, are retreating through East Tennessee, making forced marches into Virginia to reinforce Lee, who is steadily falling back toward Richmond. If this should prove correct, there is every probability that Pemberton will also make his exit from Mississippi into Alabama, and thence eastward. A few days will develop which, if any, of the rumors are correct."

On Oct. 28, a flag of truce arrived at Springfield, Mo., from Murrow Parsons, at Yellville, Ark., asking for the appointment of joint commissioners, to arrange the cartel for exchanging prisoners. They claim to have paroled nearly 2,000 militiamen and volunteers in Missouri, and want to exchange them for guerrillas, paroled and in prison. As the flag-bearer must have dodged our pickets, and stole through our lines very cautiously, Gen. Curtis telegraphed to Springfield to detain him until further orders.

Advices from the army in Southeast Missouri state that after the recent success of our forces at Pittman's Ferry, Cols. Lazar and Dewey, with their forces combined, pushed on as far as Ballinger Mills, five miles from Pocahontas, where they fought Rosser's, completely routing his forces, and capturing a large number of prisoners, including many rebel officers. A later dispatch from Col. Lazar says he has captured and disperced two hundred of Moore's command.

GENERAL NEWS.

The steamship Arabia reached this City last evening, from Boston, and we give elsewhere her Irish and London correspondence, which will be found of much interest. We add nothing in our newspaper slip to add to the very full telegraphic summary of news received from Halifax.

Last evening, in Tammany Hall, Mr. John Van Buren addressed the Democracy in a speech that was very similar in the one delivered by him ten or twelve days ago in the Brooklyn Academy of Music. The only thing new of importance was the explanation of how he obtained Gen. Scott's letter to Mr. Seward. It was made a present to him, he says, by the General himself.

The gale of Sunday night was very destructive of life and property on the Lakes. On Lake Ontario from thirty to forty lives were lost.

The Board of Aldermen met at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The name of John A. G. Gray, (Central Park Commissioner,) for Street Commissioner, was rejected by 9 to 4. The Special Committee on the prosecution of Wm. P. Rossiter, the Commissioner of the Croton Aqueduct Department, were discharged from further consideration of the case, and the bond was rejected by 10 to 3. The Superintendent of Roads failed to the resolution inquiring how many men he employs, [illegible]

[illegible] Democratic districts, with every prospect of success, in spite of their open, avowed, blatant sympathy with the rebellion. Fernando is opposed by Capt. Duryee of the Sixth-ward and Rox. by Gen. Wadsworth. Both these Union men are doing every thing in their power to save the City from the disgrace of being misrepresented by Secessionists, and they will of course have the aid and votes of every loyal man.

Candidates for the Assembly.

The election of Members of Assembly this Fall, derives special importance from the fact that the Legislature this Winter has to choose a United States Senator in place of Preston King, whose term of service will expire. Every loyal man feels it to be of the utmost importance, either that Mr. King himself, who has been true to the principles on which he was chosen, should be reelected, or that some one equally reliable and equally qualified for the position should be appointed in his place. To place a Seymour Submissionist in that high position for six years, would be a prostitution of the influence and power of the Empire State to which no loyal citizen would willingly submit. The only way of securing the election of a Union Senator is to secure the election of loyal men to the Assembly; and this is the special duty which devolves upon the electors of this City and State to-day. Next in importance to the election of a Union Governor and of Union members of Congress, stands the election of the Union candidates for the Legislature.

Up to the present time all questions of personal preference for Senator have been avoided. There has been no canvassing of the comparative merits of individuals, or of the relative claims of rival aspirants. All issues of that sort have been postponed, as they should be, until the power of the Legislature to choose any Union man can be established. The first thing to be done is to secure a Union majority in the Assembly; after that is done, it will be an easy task to reconcile or settle the rival claims of individuals. And if that is not done the sympathizers with rebellion will fill the place to suit themselves.

Yet in spite of all this there seems to be a determination on the part of some who profess to be loyal Union men to defeat the election of Union candidates in several of the City Assembly Districts. In the Sixth District a third candidate, John Price, has been put in nomination against Mr. Van Schaick, the regular nominee of both the Republican and Union Parties, with the evident purpose of securing the election of the Seymour candidate. In the Seventh District, where Thomas E. Stewart, a young lawyer of fine talents and unexceptionable character, has been nominated by the Union and Republican parties, Dr. E. V. Preu, who holds a clerkship in the Comptroller's Office, has been nominated as a Union man, for the purpose of aiding the election of the Seymour nominee;—and in the Tenth District, two other men have been put in nomination, to draw off votes from Orin D. Swan, the regular Republican and Union nominee.

All these factious movements are very discreditable to those who are engaged in them. They have been mainly brought about by what styles itself the People's Union Party—an Association made up mainly of discontented aspirants for place, and of men who seek to control public movements for the promotion of their selfish ends. The well-meaning portion of our fellow-citizens should be on their guard against these mischievous intriguers. Let them give their votes so as to secure the election of loyal men; and the only way to do this is to vote for the regular candidates of the Republicans and Union citizens.

An Omission in Democratic Speeches.

We have studied faithfully the speeches of Mr. Seymour, Mr. Van Buren and the Woods. We find there many denunciations and many epithets of eulogy. We hear continually of the sufferings of a small class of traitorous Northerners, who, in a time of great public peril, have been sent to prison without benefit of habeas corpus. We listen, also, to the story of the wrongs and the calamities of Southern traitors. No words of hatred and scorn are too strong against the great party at the North who have opposed the extension of Slavery, and who now seek to destroy the rebellion. Even the old Abolitionists come in for a share of their reproach, and the poor, despised slaves, whom any man of common humanity would at least pass by in silent pity at such a time as this, are not too low to be objects of their anger and ribaldry.

But there is one class they never allude to. In all their geographical sketches of future Confederacies, they omit all mention both of these people and their destiny. Within the Southern States is a mountainous and fertile region, where climate and race have united to produce the most vigorous and the most independent population on this continent. In this hardy community Slavery could never take root. Here Southern theories of State rights, in defence of human bondage, never flourished. When the civil war broke out and a barbarous slave aristocracy seemed about to overthrow the Government, the freedom-loving settlers in this region took sides at once with their country. They belonged by nature to the party of freedom and loyalty. Treason and rebellion raged all around them, but did not deter them. While loyalty at the North was a comfortable and profitable sentiment, with those brave men it was a terrible and dangerous fact. The powerful States around them were trampling the old flag in the dust, but these men hung their dwellings, or cherished it in secret. No help was near them. The Government seemed to have abandoned them. They were encircled with traitors; yet they never wavered. Soon their houses were attacked. Some were dragged forth and murdered by the wayside; some were thrown into filthy prisons, to be taken out and shot; some were scourged; their mangled corpses were hung with all indignities by the public roads; others were fined, [illegible] their cattle killed and stolen; every [illegible] and atrocity was heaped upon these unfortunate persons—and all because they were true to the Republic in its hours of danger and misfortune. Yet, all these cruelties and this brutal oppression only kindled the flame of loyalty brighter in the hearts of these kindred loyalists of Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina and Kentucky.

Now, if there is anything a man will not endure patiently, it is friends who have suffered from too devoted friendship to himself. Whatever else the misfortune of war and the incompetency of our Generals may, in the possible future, cause the North to forget and neglect, the very last should be the sufferings and the destiny of the loyalists of the South—the noble and brave men who have been persecuted solely from having loved the Union too well. We only speak the feelings of every honest man in the Free States, when we say that the grass shall grow in our busiest streets, and every house be stripped of every comfort, and every life be offered, before these brave men and heroic women shall be given up to the tender mercies of a Southern Confederacy.

And yet, in all the speeches of the Democratic leaders in this canvass, where is there an allusion to the wrongs and sufferings, or to the destiny of this unfortunate and heroic population in the South? They have pity enough for Secessionists who have spent a few days in Fort Lafayette. They have none for Southern loyal men. They have wrath enough against Republicans and Abolitionists, but none against the spoilers and murderers of the friends of the Union in Tennessee and Kentucky, and many other parts of the South. Mr. Van Buren publishes for us a new political map, but not even a county of it is appropriated to the Southern men who have period all, and lost all, for our flag andour Government. They may be exiles, or homeless, or beggars, mourning in other communities the base ingratitude of a nation, or they may become the white slaves of the new Slave Confederacy, in the new political system which the New-York Submissionist Democracy would construct.

Will the country be as forgetful in the coming election as these Democratic leaders?

Fraudulent Voters.

At every voting place in the City to-day a policeman will stand, all day long, with a list in his hand of the names of all persons who have sworn themselves to be aliens. If any man of this class presents himself to vote, he will instantly be arrested for having criminally attempted to evade the draft. There are seventeen thousand persons in the City who, in order to escape the draft, have sworn that they are aliens. It will not be safe for any one of these to be found interfering with the elective franchise. The result will be a quiet poll, and a considerable deficit in the Seymour vote.

Muscular Politics.

We see now and then pleasantries indulged in over the phrase "Muscular Christianity." Without discussing here the applicability of the descriptive word in such connection, we hold it is eminently fit when applied to politics. There is a pressing necessity at this time—on this day—for the display of "muscular politics." It is not easy always to get to the polls. But to-day it must be done. It is not pleasant ever to wait in a crowd for hours to get your turn. But to-day it may have to be done. It is not agreeable to have to urge up indifferent or indolent men, whose hearts are right, to the polls. But, to-day, of all days, in time, it must be done. It is not comfortable nor always personally safe to come between a fraudulent voter and the ballot-box. But whenever you can, and at whatever risk or cost, it must be done. All this work at and around the polls requires the exercise of "muscular politics;" and however much averse all amiable, quiet, orderly citizens may be to the rough usage and uncivil temper displayed often at voting places, no patriot should sacrifice his duty to his personal inclinations by staying away and losing his vote.

For this day, at least, let every friend of the Union consider himself merely a "muscular politician," and go in with the single aim to put his own vote in the ballot-box, and work to get every other true vote in, as if the fate of the nation depended on his sole personal exertions.

Seed-Time and Harvest.

It will be a terrible crime if the loyal voters of New-York throw away their victory and their power to-day, by failing to put in their ballots. Not more insane would it be, if all the farmers of the State, after plowing, and planting, and maturing their crops by patient labor through all the Summer, should abandon their harvests in Autumn to rot in the field. Such insanity is our only political danger.

The loyal Press and our laborious public speakers who have stood for their country in this canvass, have done their duty well. The people have been aroused, they understand the issues, they know their importance, they are able to carry the State and save all. The question is: Will they do it? Will they gather the ripened fruit, or prove unworthy so much as to pluck victory when it is brought plainly within their grasp?

How Victory may be Lost in Defeat.

The season of argument is past, and the hour of action is at hand. Within the brief hours of sunlight allotted to this day will be done the work that may fix the destiny of the Republic for generations.

We must feel that these hours of work are more precious than all others that have gone before in the canvass. A noble campaign has [illegible] and official wrong went forth to the [illegible] poverty; their crops were seized, or [illegible] their cattle killed and stolen; every [illegible] and atrocity was heaped upon these unfortunate persons—and all because they were true to the Republic in its hours of danger and misfortune. Yet, all these cruelties and this brutal oppression only kindled the flame of loyalty brighter in the hearts of these kindred loyalists of Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina and Kentucky.

Now, if there is anything a man will not endure patiently, it is friends who have suffered from too devoted friendship to himself. Whatever else the misfortune of war and the incompetency of our Generals may, in the possible future, cause the North to forget and neglect, the very last should be the sufferings and the destiny of the loyalists of the South—the noble and brave men who have been persecuted solely from having loved the Union too well. We only speak the feelings of every honest man in the Free States, when we say that the grass shall grow in our busiest streets, and every house be stripped of every comfort, and every life be offered, before these brave men and heroic women shall be given up to the tender mercies of a Southern Confederacy.

And yet, in all the speeches of the Democratic leaders in this canvass, where is there an allusion to the wrongs and sufferings, or to the destiny of this unfortunate and heroic population in the South? They have pity enough for Secessionists who have spent a few days in Fort Lafayette. They have none for Southern loyal men. They have wrath enough against Republicans and Abolitionists, but none against the spoilers and murderers of the friends of the Union in Tennessee and Kentucky, and many other parts of the South. Mr. Van Buren publishes for us a new political map, but not even a county of it is appropriated to the Southern men who have period all, and lost all, for our flag andour Government. They may be exiles, or homeless, or beggars, mourning in other communities the base ingratitude of a nation, or they may become the white slaves of the new Slave Confederacy, in the new political system which the New-York Submissionist Democracy would construct.

Will the country be as forgetful in the coming election as these Democratic leaders?

The season of argument is past, and the hour of action is at hand. Within the brief hours of sunlight allotted to this day will be done the work that may fix the destiny of the Republic for generations.

We must feel that these hours of work are more precious than all others that have gone before in the canvass. A noble campaign has [illegible]

[illegible] fake. Mr. R. has written no such letter. In an early stage of the canvass he may have expressed apprehensions of the result from the comparative inactivity of the Republicans and Union men;—but with every day of the campaign this feeling diminished, and all his more recent letters to Gen. Wadsworth have indicated increasing confidence in his success by a very handsome majority. Mr. Raymond during the canvass has visited every portion of the State, and has formed his opinions of the result from personal observation and inquiry. He will be very much disappointed if Wadsworth's majority should be less than 20,000.

Rebels and Rebel Sympathizers on the Qui Vive.

The latest journals from the Confederacy and from England, manifest the liveliest interest in our elections, and are of one accord in wishing the success of what they call the Democratic tickets. The Richmond Enquirer congratulates the rebels upon the results of the elections in Ohio and Indiana, as "showing that the Northwest is weary of the war." The Richmond Examiner, referring to the New-York election, "the most important of all," says that "it is not to be denied that a Democratic victory at the North would be a subject of much gratification." It yet warns the South against indulging in "too sanguine expectations from the advent to control of the Democratic politicians of the North," representing that "while now and then are to be found one Pierce, one Vallandigham, one Wood and two Seymours, like the five just men in Sodom, yet the great body of our Northern friends are as fierce in their apostacy to former principles as Burnet himself." The London Times, of Oct. 18, declares that "the only chance of any terms the South may offer being considered is in a change in the position of the political parties of the North. The State elections there are now pending, and the result of the contest is almost of more importance than any immediate operations in the field." The London Post and the Manchester Guardian, also, have articles on the same subject, which look to the triumph of the Democratic candidates as a means of restoring peace and disrupting the Union.

Now how is it possible, in the face of these manifestations, for any loyal man to imagine that the success of the Seymour ticket will promote the more vigorous prosecution of the war? Is it to be supposed that these champions of the Confederacy don't understand who their real friends are, and that they are craving as a piece of good fortune what would prove to them but an aggravation of all their former woes? When Horatio Seymour is singled out, with four others as specially, and almost solely, worthy of consideration, is it because he wishes well or wishes ill to the Confederacy? Because he intends them help or intends them ruin? Because he proposes to join in more effective war upon them, or to lead off in efforts for such a peace as would suit them?

Nothing short of the extremest credulity can accept such notions. It cannot be that these rebels in the South, and the well-wishers of rebels in Europe, should all be so moonstruck as to believe and proclaim that their cause was to be benefited by the accession to power of Horatio Seymour and his associates, when it was actually to be smitten down and annihilated. Wicked as these Confederates have been, both in respect to their ends and their means, yet nobody can deny their sagacity and astuteness. From the beginning they have displayed all the statecraft as well as all the Punic faith, and in their present desperate straits, their wits are sharper than ours. They are the last men on earth to mistake enemies for friends, either in military or in political operations. Though they may not themselves be in direct communication with these Northern leaders, they yet, through the rebels of Maryland and the other Border States, have the means of knowing all about them—their spirit, purposes, methods, plans, aims and ends. Besides all these private

The loyal freemen of New-York have now to pronounce whether they will give power to the men who are trusted by traitors, or to the men who are feared by them. Shall the result to-day strike confidence or dismay in the rebel councils? It can no longer be questioned that the election of Seymour will give aid and comfort to the enemy. But to give aid and comfort to the enemy is just what makes treason. A vote cast for him, with whatever good faith, will nevertheless do the work of treason, so far as it goes. The duty of every loyal man is to make his ballot a moral and a political force against, and not for the rebels. That the support of James S. Wadsworth will secure the former purpose, no man of any party denies. And it is now as clear as the noon-tide that the latter end, and no other, will be accomplished by voting for Horatio Seymour.

The Congressional Districts.

The Democrats in the Eighth District have withdrawn their candidate, and given James Brooks, who represents the Know-Nothing rump in the secession coalition, a clear field against Elliot C. Cowdin, the Union candidate. Mr Brooks expects the Catholic and foreign vote, on account of his life-long persecution of both. He will get it, if Catholics and foreign-born citizens love their enemies better than their religion or their country. If not, not. Mr. Cowdin is a merchant of high standing, a gentleman of ability, and in every way worthy the hearty and effective support of loyal men. He can and ought to be elected.

In the Ninth District, Col. McLean Murphy, who has always been a Democrat, but who is a patriot and a Union man, is making a gallant fight against Hillhouse, who is simply a party hack. Col. Murphy has rendered splendid service to the country in the field, having been with McClellan all through his Peninsular campaign, and will make an able and useful member of Congress.

The two Woods are running in strong [illegible]

[illegible] Democratic districts, with every prospect of success, in spite of their open, avowed, blatant sympathy with the rebellion. Fernando is opposed by Capt. Duryee of the Sixth-ward and Rox. by Gen. Wadsworth. Both these Union men are doing every thing in their power to save the City from the disgrace of being misrepresented by Secessionists, and they will of course have the aid and votes of every loyal man.

Candidates for the Assembly.

The election of Members of Assembly this Fall, derives special importance from the fact that the Legislature this Winter has to choose a United States Senator in place of Preston King, whose term of service will expire. Every loyal man feels it to be of the utmost importance, either that Mr. King himself, who has been true to the principles on which he was chosen, should be reelected, or that some one equally reliable and equally qualified for the position should be appointed in his place. To place a Seymour Submissionist in that high position for six years, would be a prostitution of the influence and power of the Empire State to which no loyal citizen would willingly submit. The only way of securing the election of a Union Senator is to secure the election of loyal men to the Assembly; and this is the special duty which devolves upon the electors of this City and State to-day. Next in importance to the election of a Union Governor and of Union members of Congress, stands the election of the Union candidates for the Legislature.

Up to the present time all questions of personal preference for Senator have been avoided. There has been no canvassing of the comparative merits of individuals, or of the relative claims of rival aspirants. All issues of that sort have been postponed, as they should be, until the power of the Legislature to choose any Union man can be established. The first thing to be done is to secure a Union majority in the Assembly; after that is done, it will be an easy task to reconcile or settle the rival claims of individuals. And if that is not done the sympathizers with rebellion will fill the place to suit themselves.

Yet in spite of all this there seems to be a determination on the part of some who profess to be loyal Union men to defeat the election of Union candidates in several of the City Assembly Districts. In the Sixth District a third candidate, John Price, has been put in nomination against Mr. Van Schaick, the regular nominee of both the Republican and Union Parties, with the evident purpose of securing the election of the Seymour candidate. In the Seventh District, where Thomas E. Stewart, a young lawyer of fine talents and unexceptionable character, has been nominated by the Union and Republican parties, Dr. E. V. Preu, who holds a clerkship in the Comptroller's Office, has been nominated as a Union man, for the purpose of aiding the election of the Seymour nominee;—and in the Tenth District, two other men have been put in nomination, to draw off votes from Orin D. Swan, the regular Republican and Union nominee.

All these factious movements are very discreditable to those who are engaged in them. They have been mainly brought about by what styles itself the People's Union Party—an Association made up mainly of discontented aspirants for place, and of men who seek to control public movements for the promotion of their selfish ends. The well-meaning portion of our fellow-citizens should be on their guard against these mischievous intriguers. Let them give their votes so as to secure the election of loyal men; and the only way to do this is to vote for the regular candidates of the Republicans and Union citizens.

An Omission in Democratic Speeches.

We have studied faithfully the speeches of Mr. Seymour, Mr. Van Buren and the Woods. We find there many denunciations and many epithets of eulogy. We hear continually of the sufferings of a small class of traitorous Northerners, who, in a time of great public peril, have been sent to prison without benefit of habeas corpus. We listen, also, to the story of the wrongs and the calamities of Southern traitors. No words of hatred and scorn are too strong against the great party at the North who have opposed the extension of Slavery, and who now seek to destroy the rebellion. Even the old Abolitionists come in for a share of their reproach, and the poor, despised slaves, whom any man of common humanity would at least pass by in silent pity at such a time as this, are not too low to be objects of their anger and ribaldry.

But there is one class they never allude to. In all their geographical sketches of future Confederacies, they omit all mention both of these people and their destiny. Within the Southern States is a mountainous and fertile region, where climate and race have united to produce the most vigorous and the most independent population on this continent. In this hardy community Slavery could never take root. Here Southern theories of State rights, in defence of human bondage, never flourished. When the civil war broke out and a barbarous slave aristocracy seemed about to overthrow the Government, the freedom-loving settlers in this region took sides at once with their country. They belonged by nature to the party of freedom and loyalty. Treason and rebellion raged all around them, but did not deter them. While loyalty at the North was a comfortable and profitable sentiment, with those brave men it was a terrible and dangerous fact. The powerful States around them were trampling the old flag in the dust, but these men hung their dwellings, or cherished it in secret. No help was near them. The Government seemed to have abandoned them. They were encircled with traitors; yet they never wavered. Soon their houses were attacked. Some were dragged forth and murdered by the wayside; some were thrown into filthy prisons, to be taken out and shot; some were scourged; their mangled corpses were hung with all indignities by the public roads; others were fined, [illegible]

A Look Ahead.

We have no idea that Mr. Seymour is to be elected Governor of this State, but if such an event should happen, we desire to put on record a prediction or two.

1. We predict that, if such shall be the result of the coming election, the rebels will gloat over it in terms which will [illegible] the stock of any man who does [illegible]

2. We predict that such a result will be a great encouragement to them to lengthen the war, and that the evidence that it is such will be forthcoming before three weeks are gone.

3. We predict that such a result will be claimed by those who hate us abroad, to be a verdict of the people against the prosecution of the war, and that it will thus lead directly to the intervention of Foreign Powers in our affairs in favor of the rebels.

4. We predict that in case of such intervention, the election of Mr. Seymour, should he be elected, will be put forward by the foreign Governments as an excuse for their intervention.

5. We predict that in six months after such a result those who are now in favor of continuing the war till the rebellion is suppressed, will be compelled to admit that that result was the first step toward the recognition of the Southern Confederacy.

6. We predict that if the question of recognizing the Southern Confederacy does ever come up for discussion in this State, the prominent supporters of Mr. Seymour will be prominent advocates of such recognition.

We put these predictions on record, and though we shall do all in our power to prevent their fulfillment, yet if they are fulfilled, we shall not fail to remind some men who are now favoring the election of Seymour, that they voted for the dissolution of the Union, and the destruction of the Nation.

Border-State View of Our Election.

The Baltimore American a day or two since had an able article on the "New Element of Disunion in the Field," in which it laments the "sudden expansion to formidable dimensions of a disloyal faction in the loyal States," and adds:

"Hardly known, but a little time ago, it has lately become emboldened to the last degree in its attempt to distract the North, and to throw discredit upon the Government; and unless the people watch and thwart its purposes, the mischief it may do will prove incalculable. One of the worst effects of its advent, already apparent, is to encourage the traitors in the field with false hopes—something that cannot but tend to prolong a useless struggle, causing more loss of life and more distress, otherwise unknown. At the head of these malcontents, as liberated, is the obnoxious Fernando Wood, whose very name, so long identified with the worst phases of New-York municipal affairs, seems only a synonym with corruption and all that is disreputable."

It then gives a scathing review of the secession antecedents of Fernando Wood, quotes from his disunion message to the Common Council on the 5th of January, 1861, and continues:

"Now, could anything have been, at such a crisis in the nation's troubles, more devilish and treasonably suggestive than this Eden-like picture thus artfully drawn by the arch-tempter, now in his new role willing to have it all forgotten? Worse even than many of the more moderate traitors at Charleston, who would have gladly gone out on the line of the Slave States, this bold plotter contemplated a general breaking up, a disruption which should scatter everything North and West, leaving only New-York City entirely held in alliance with the 'Southern States.' How can such an one, with this damning record filed against him, ever have the audacity to utter the word 'Union' again, much less profess patriotism, devotion to it? We quote once more, that the people of Maryland—so often accused of disloyalty—may know what kind of men are tolerated in New-York.

The passage is then quoted in which Fernando proposed that New-York should "disrupt the bonds which bind her to a corrupt and venal master"—not alluding to himself, but to the constitutional Government of the country—and the American concludes:

"The arch-tempter entirely failed to his cherished schemes as soon as they were put forth, and he was necessitated to hurry up an exhibit of manufactured patriotism to save himself from the direst vengeance of the people he sought thus to betray. But he is there, and tolerated; and more still, professes patriotism whilst again seeking to compromise the cause dear to all. Making man like Seymour and John Van Buren his cats-paws, he is to-day one of the best hopes of the rebels in the field, who look upon him as their most effective instrument in distracting and dividing the North, and turning aside from them the punishment so justly provoked. Although the country may struggle through its present troubles triumphantly; although the Union may indeed be restored—as long as there is no intelligence that patriotism enough in the country to frown down such malignant and mischievous predecessors appears, we shall never be rid of agitation, distraction, of factious to threaten new complications and disruption.

Treacherous in their instincts, and seeking only an alliance with the traitors at Richmond, the venom of blood already shed would be nothing to them if they could again grasp power, and they must be put down at home, before the land is to be betrayed to prolonged horrors through their machinations."

These earnest words from the chief organ of the Border State Unionists, should be heeded in New-York. The patriots of the Border States have a deep interest in these pending elections. They have struggled and suffered for the Union. In danger, in difficulty, in darkness, they have clung to the good old Constitution. Against many of their prejudices, against many of their interests, against the overshadowing interest of Slavery itself, they have adhered to the Government. They now implore us that we will not blight their [illegible] may use the power which they have [illegible] unwilling to sacrifice everything, by yielding to places of power the traitors and semi-traitors who have the audacity to demand the suffrages of the people of the Empire State.

The Sixth Congressional District.

We have received sundry protests against our remarks on the division among the Union men of the Sixth District;—but we see nothing to change our conviction that every vote cast for Mr. BLUNT will really go to aid the election of the Seymour and secession candidate. Indeed, we believe that the object of those who have been foremost in nominating Mr. BLUNT has been, and still is, not to elect him, but to defeat CONKLING. We have been told, on unquestionable authority, that the gentleman who has been, perhaps, the most efficient in this matter, has said that they would give BLUNT votes enough to elect Ward,—if nothing more.

This being the case, we think it shameful that the loyalty of the District should be thus betrayed into the election of a disloyal man. Grant everything that may be claimed about Mr. CONKLING'S personal unpopularity; grant that he did wrong in voting against large appropriations for the Coast Survey during the war,—are these valid reasons for throwing the District into the hands of the Submission Democrats, and placing in Congress another ally of the Woods and Vallandighams in their sympathy with treason?

There is too much at stake in this election to tolerate such trifling with the public interests. The loss of this District may cost us the organization of the next House of Representatives,—secure to the Submissionists the choice of Speaker and the appointment of all the committees, and throw the whole weight of Congress against the Government and in favor of a disgraceful and ruinous compromise with the rebels. Are Mr. BLUNT and his friends willing to take the responsibility of such a result?

If the loyal men of the Sixth District will do their duty, Mr. CONKLING can be elected: and in no other way can the district be saved. We trust they will not jeopard that result by casting their votes on Mr. BLUNT.

☞ Let every voter look carefully at the ballot that he casts and see that it is headed with the name of JAMES S. WADSWORTH. We understand that fraudulent tickets are afloat, in which the S. is left out, with the view of robbing us of votes through inadvertence. Recollect that there is a JAMES WADSWORTH also, who is too good a Union man to be pleased to have any Union vote cast for him at this election, whether accidentally or otherwise. A vote for JAMES WADSWORTH may be a vote thrown away and regretted. A vote for JAMES S. WADSWORTH can never be a cause of grief.

GEN. WALBRIDGE THE MAN TO REPRESENT THE GREAT COMMERCIAL DISTRICT OF NEW-YORK.—The commerce of New-York now rests upon its grain trade, which is far greater than that of any other city in the world. The Corn Exchange, the body of gentlemen that carry on this trade, have presented the name of Gen. HIRAM WALBRIDGE, one of its members, as a fitting person to represent it in the national council. Is not this the proper source for a nomination from the district which embraces the commercial portions of this great City? As against such a nomination what can Mr. WOOD offer? Is there a single clear-headed merchant that would not regard his election as a public calamity? Not one; nor is there an intelligent voter in the district that is not of the same opinion.

A TEST OF PATRIOTISM AND FIDELITY.—For full ten years the New-York Express has proscribed "Irishmen, reviled "Cross JOHN HUGHES," and persecuted the Catholic Church. One of the Brookses has been elected to Congress, where he labored to restrict the elective franchise against adopted citizens. The other Brooks was elected to the Senate of this State, as a "Know-Nothing," where he persecuted and calumniated Bishop HUGHES. The Express has existed upon its hostility to Irishmen and Catholics. It now exhorts Irishmen and Catholics to elect JAMES BROOKS to Congress. Will they do it? We shall see. But if they do, we shall witness a degree of debasement and ignominy which will make every manly Catholic hide his face.

THE "LET-ALONE" PARTY.—Mr. SEYMOUR says, "There is an instinctive difference between the two parties. The Democratic Party is a Let-alone party. The Republican Party is a Meddling party."

We have heard of other let-alone parties. The legion of devils just before they entered into the swine were a Let-alone party. The Jews have always been a Let-alone party, and as they were the chief part of the Democratic Party, so far, at least, Mr. SEYMOUR'S remark was true. The burglar who breaks into a house, or the sneak thief who runs away with the spoons, is always a Let-alone party, and the "fence," who receives the stolen goods, is sure to berate the policeman who interferes to catch the burglar or the thief, as a Meddling party.

Happily, there are a great many Democrats as well as Republicans who, when they see traitors endeavoring to sneak into places of trust, that they may assist those who would rob the nation of its jewels, propose at once to meddle with them.

☞ The attention of a Democrat who said he was in favor of the war, but should vote for SEYMOUR, was called to the fact that by so doing he would be in company with every traitor in the State. His answer was, that he would rather be with them than with the Republicans.

There were some others who had like preferences. MANSFIELD LOVELL and GUSTAVUS A. SMITH preferred to be with the traitors. They, however, were willing to incur danger by their preferences. These Seymourites, who had rather be with the traitors among us, are very careful to avoid danger.

The Republicans are willing to work with any one who shows this country, in order to save it. [illegible] their country their party ties. Let the people judge on which side is patriotism.

A CONTRADICTION.—THURLOW WEED makes the following statement in correction of a paragraph which appeared in a morning paper:

Gov. SEWARD took no part, directly or indirectly, in the deliberations of our State Convention. The "friends" of Gov. SEWARD, generally, are cordially supporting the Union State ticket. I have never "declared that the defeat of Wadsworth was an accomplished fact," and while it is true that I urged upon the Union State Convention the nomination of Gen. DIX, I have, from the moment Gen. WADSWORTH was nominated, given him and our whole State ticket my steady and earnest support.

THURLOW WEED.

City Candidates for the Assembly.

As a general thing, the candidates of the Republicans and Union men in this City for the State Assembly, are men in every way worthy of popular favor and confidence. They have been put in nomination as the representatives of the loyal sentiment of our people, without reference to mere party divisions, and they deserve the hearty support of all who desire to see this State thoroughly and unmistakably on the side of the Government in its contest with the rebellion.

We have alluded elsewhere to some of these candidates, especially in districts which have been put in jeopardy by the schemes of factionists, claiming to be Union men, but seeking the defeat of the Union candidates. This is the case especially in the Sixth District, where Mr. VAN SCHAICK is the Union nominee, in the Seventh, where Mr. STEWART is the regular candidate, in the Ninth, where Mr. VAN VORST is running, in the Tenth, where Mr. SWAN is in nomination, and in some others.

In the Eleventh District, W. R. ROBINSON, Esq., who is running as an Independent candidate, deserves support, as a true and loyal man—well known to the country from his former connection with the Tribune, and more recently from his active participation in politics.

In the Fifteenth District, JOHN H. WHITE, Esq., is in nomination against Ex-Judge DEAN, who is thoroughly known as in full communion with FERNANDO WOOD, and as an ultra Pro-Slavery Submissionist. Mr. WHITE is a lawyer of excellent ability, and of high character. He was a member of the Assembly in 1860, and did the City and himself the highest credit. He ought by all means to be returned.

In the Sixteenth District, DENNIS MCCARR runs as the Union candidate against a brace of Submissionists. He is one of the most popular men in his district, and carried it last year by a very handsome majority. In the Assembly he was true as steel to the principles on which he was elected, and rendered faithful and effective service. He deserves the vote of every loyal man in his district.

Other Union candidates are in nomination with whom we have less acquaintance, but who are doubtless equally worthy of support. But these men we know, and commend them most heartily to the public confidence.

Kings County Nominations for the Assembly.

In Kings County the Republicans and Union men have very wisely put in nomination for reelection several members of the last Legislature. They will thus secure for the protection of their interests and for the general service of the State, the experience of one session, which is always of the greatest value, and adds greatly to the ease as well as the efficiency with which these duties are performed.

Among the members thus renominated are Messrs. WM. M. THOMAS, S. T. MADDOX and CHAS. L. BENEDICT—and each one of them has well earned this mark of confidence at the hands of his constituents. Mr. THOMAS is a man of excellent judgment, careful and painstaking in the performance of his duties, and of the most unimpeachable integrity. He was always in his place, and was always reliable. He enjoyed the regard and confidence of all his fellow-members.

Mr. MADDOX was among the most active and vigilant members of the Assembly, and discharged all his duties, both upon Committees and on the floor, with industry, energy, and the most absolute fidelity to his constituents. He is very popular in Brooklyn, and will undoubtedly be reelected.

Mr. BENEDICT was among the most laborious and influential members of the House. To great clearness and strength of mind, he added force of character, untiring industry, and an obstinate integrity which no one ever questioned. He held a prominent place on the Judiciary Committee, and on the Committee on Cities, and upon both—as well as on the Select Committee of Nine, formed to expedite business—he contributed very largely to the best work of the session. His opponent, Mr. CALLICOT, was a member of the Legislature of 1860, and was remarkable for nothing but for his active participation in all the corrupt schemes which have given that session such an unenviable celebrity. Mr. BENEDICT deserves the hearty and unanimous support of his constituents.

We trust that all these gentlemen will be elected.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Camille of Miss MATILDA HERON has been so long before the public, and has so often and so broadly received the seal of approbation, alike from those who criticise and also those who accept from long habit whatever may be set before them without any attempt at criticism, that to bestow praise upon it now seems almost a work of verbal supererogation. And yet this lady, in her personation of the character at NIBLO'S Garden on Saturday evening—her first appearance upon the stage since being torn from it by a domestic affliction, which made any attempt to shadow forth the unreal sorrows of a fictitious character something not to be thought of—developed throughout her acting so many new points of passion and of pathos, giving to the picture so many more touches of life and beauty and tenderness than it had when she first dashed it on the stage, startling and electrifying audiences, that a few words relative to it may not be out of place.

In saying that Miss HERON acts Camille, we do her injustice. She does not act the character—she lives it. Her soul takes up the character, and carries it beyond the domain of Art into the sacred sanctuary of Nature. It is no longer the conventional Camille of the stage, but a live woman, within deep passionate loving heart, sacrificing her happiness, and with it life, to her love, and living out to the world the wrongs which woman so often suffer in silence. She draws the audience up to her in her outreaching, *passionate arms, and there holds them in a trance*d spell, until they fall with the curtain and wake to applaud. This applause is not given at stated periods—the illusion is too deep and real. It manifests itself only after the audience has had time to shake off the feeling that all before them is real, and become conscious that it is to Art, which so counterfeits Nature as to cheat them thus, that tribute is due.

The accessories of the play, as it is now given, are, in the main, excellent. In the real champagne which comes in with the supper table, we are willing to drown all memory of the solecism of green glasses in which the libations are poured, and in the music which we mentioned under the head of France. The speech of Miss HERON's lover, [illegible] the Duke of Richelieu, in renouncing the whim [illegible] but it was characterized by the most exquisite taste. The part of Armand was well rendered by Mr. STEVENS, who makes love in the impassioned style of the good old fiery feudal times, and scatters his passion stamps around in the fourth act with a prodigality and grace that must make to meet to be appreciated. In addition to his own talent for impersonating Mr. STEVENS has the advantage of offering it in near contrast to the lovemaking of Mr. FORREST on the same stage—and we question if ever before love was so wonderfully and fearfully made as we have seen it made, of late, by the last-named gentleman. In the part of Madame Prudence, Miss MARY WINNE was slightly more fuddled and funny than to our thinking the occasion called for, and we would suggest to that lady that the character she is called upon to personate in the mildest possible rendering is quite broad enough, and constitutionally coarse to a degree, that makes it wholly unnecessary for her to broaden or deepen its vulgarity and offensiveness, by even a single line or gesture. Contrast between the characters of Camille and Prudence was meant by the novelist when the latter one was flung in, like a toad on a flower-bed, but the contrast is quite marked, and painful enough when drawn as mild as it consistently can be. As for Miss HERON'S Camille, that approaches as nearly to life, and consequently to perfection, as any personation well can; and we are only presumptuous enough to venture one suggestion by which she may possibly better it. The French have a saying about "tears in one's voice," and it seems to us that at times Miss HERON attempts to put too many into hers. Three full tiers always groupin silent and mournful admiration around her Camille, to say nothing of the wrapt parquette and dress-circle, and to have these within the compass of her voice is quite sufficient. Setting this slightly unnatural trill or rill of tone aside, however, and we are confident that all who see Miss HERON'S Camille will join in the verdict when we pronounce it (to use a new and original phrase) one of the greatest—if not the greatest—personations of character ever presented on the American stage. Camille is repeated on this and on Saturday evenings.

It will be noticed by the admirers of Mr. FORREST—and their name is legion—that that eminent tragedian will complete his present engagement with the current week. He has selected some of his finest parts for the occasion, and—remembering the anxiety there is to see him therein—it would be discreet for intending visitors to secure seats as early as possible.

WINTER GARDEN.—Mr. EDWIN BOOTH'S capacity, physically and intellectually, for so small a part as that of Claude Melnotte, in the "Lady of Lyons," will hardly be disputed by the public, and there was scarcely a doubt, therefore, that the managerial statement concerning the performance being "a perfect ideal of the dramatist's conception," would in some way be realized. But general declarations of managers are not much more reliable than those of politicians, and after the occasion that has drawn them forth, are the subject of grave qualifications. Mr. BOOTH'S Claude is different in many respects from the usual conception of the character, but as far as we can understand the author's meaning, it is anything but an ideal;—we should hesitate in fact, even to call it a realization of the ordinary traits of the part.

There is not much to analyze in the character of the gardener's son. Broadly considered, it is nothing but an incongruous mass of youthful impetuosity and remorse, seasoned with the ordinary heroism of love and ambition. The moment the character ceases to be young, it ceases to be interesting, and this is precisely the circumstance that Mr. BOOTH overlooks. Claude, in his hands, is a crafty deceiver, as full of shrugs as Iago, and as wide awake as Mephistopheles, a wily conspirator, who knows the risk, and takes the chances,—not a passionate swain, blinded by the possible attainment of his heart's desire. Beaussant is usually an object of execration. He it is who induces the low-born peasant to swerve from the path of honor, and for the basest of all motives, revenge, to act the lie which subsequently stuns him with its consequences. We are greatly mistaken if Beaussant was not an object of sympathy last night. The facial warnings, distinct affronts, watchful distrust, and general [illegible]ance, to which Claude subjected him, would have been harassing to the most hardened pickpocket, and became in the end so oppressive that one could hardly help pitying the poor fellow. It is probable that over-elaboration is the defect of Mr. Booth's performance. It is possible also to say that it is intellectual—but it will be perceived that neither of these is the characteristic of youthful impetuosity. In an elocutionary point of view, some of the best speeches were spoken with rare skill, but the whole performance lacked inspiration.

Mrs. BARROW, who will be remembered by our readers, made her rentrée in the part of Pauline, and gave dignity to that ungracious rôle. Mr. DAVENS was good as Dumas; the other characters were only moderately well sustained.

Mr. GRAU'S plan for the forthcoming campaign at the Academy of Music, although on a much larger scale than anything he has yet undertaken in his former brief but spirited enterprises, is characterized by the same energy and variety which always make his programmes acceptable. The temper of the times is favorable to amusements, and Mr. GRAU expands naturally with his opportunity. The season will commence on Monday next, when a charming American prima donna, Mme. GUERNERELLI, makes her début in VERDI'S "Traviata," playing the rôle of Violetta, in which her fine dramatic talents, as well as the peculiar qualities of her voice, will be exhibited to the best advantage. The next candidate for public favor will be Mlle. MOREAU, a contralto of whom report speaks in the highest terms. She will appear as Azucena, in the "Trovatore." After these artists have drawn the fire of the Press, Mme. LORINI will appear in two dramatic rôles, probably as Norma and Lucrezia, in both of which the lady is said to be admirable; and when these pale their ineffectual fires, MEYERBEER'S romantic opera of "Dinorah" ("Le Pardon de Ploermel") will be produced, with Mme. CORTESI as the principal artist. Our public will have a treat in this fine work, and we are glad to learn that there is no disposition on the part of the management to limit its engagement by a mistaken regard for economy, or an unnecessary haste in its production. Altogether, Mr. GRAU'S programme seems to promise more in the way of new artists and new operas than any we have had since the sturdy and stormy days of MAX MARETZEK.

Mr. ALBERT MARETZEK, brother of the impresario, has engaged an opera troupe for Santiago de Cuba, composed of the following artists: Mme. BOUCHARD, Miss PERSIANI, Mme. VON BERKEL, Signor SBRIGLIA, Signor TROLFO, Signor ROCCO, and Mr. BERGMANN (as conductor.) We learn that the first month's subscription already amounts to ten thousand dollars.

It is stated in musical circles that Miss KELLOGG has concluded an engagement with Mr. MAPLESON, of Her Majesty's Theatre, London, and will positively make her début there during the coming season.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE SIXTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.
(8th, 11th and 15th Wards.)
FELLOW-CITIZENS: The People's Union Congressional Convention, and Citizens of the Sixth Congressional District, take pleasure in rising before you the name of
ORISON BLUNT
As a candidate for Congress in this District, at the coming election, irrespective of party.
ORISON BLUNT is so well known as a well-known, tried, honest and faithful public servant. He served as Alderman of the Third Ward when corruption and fraud in the City Government were sifted and arrested; and as an Alderman of the Fifteenth Ward, and as Supervisor of the county, he has discharged those positions which pre-eminently entitle him to be reelected. In all respects, a man of sterling ability and unsullied integrity.
During the early days of the rebellion he was an efficient auxiliary to the Union Defence Committee, assisting in sending to the field forty-two regiments, and contributed largely of his means. Devoting his whole time to the interests of the Government, and serving without compensation, at the solicitation of the members of the Committee, he was tendered a letter of thanks and complimentary testimonials for his valuable services.
For nearly twenty-years ORISON BLUNT has been a successful business mechanic in this city, and has been largely engaged in manufacturing; and we believe he well understands the true interests of this City and the whole Country.
He has ever been a loyal and earnest lover of his country, and the whole Union, without any reservations; and we feel assured that the Government and people will find in him, if elected, an earnest and zealous supporter of all measures that will tend to crush out this unholy rebellion and restore peace to the country.

SEVENTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT.
A card having appeared in yesterday morning's papers, signed by Simon Draper, Chas. H. Marshall, and other gentlemen, recommending Dr. E. V. Price as a candidate for the Seventh Assembly District, in which THOMAS E. STEWART is the regular Republican and Union candidate, and the attention of Messrs. Draper and Marshall having been called thereto, they have addressed Mr. STEWART the following communication:
"E. E. STEWART, Sir: I have to say that I signed Mr. Price's card, not knowing that it was in opposition to the regularly nominated candidate. I am in favor of supporting you at the regular nominee of the Republican Party of the Seventh Assembly District.
C. H. MARSHALL.
NEW-YORK, Monday, Nov. 3, 1862.
SIR: I have simply to say, in regard to the Card of Dr. Price, to which my name is attached, that I signed it, as I understanded it, in a recommendation to the Nominating Committee, not as an opposing candidate of the regular candidate, Thomas E. Stewart.
Nov. 3, 1862. P. DRAPER.
TO THE ELECTORS OF THE SEVENTH ASSEMBLY DISTRICT.—THOMAS E. STEWART, the Republican-Union candidate for member of Assembly in the Seventh District, is an honest, loyal man. He has long been identified with public enterprises in this city, displaying ability of a superior character, and has always opposed extravagance in public expenditures. If elected to the Legislature he will display the same vigilance, wisdom and fidelity. We believe he will prove a faithful servant for the public weal in the metropolis of our State, and we earnestly invoke the vote and aid of every citizen of the Seventh District in electing him to the office to which he has been nominated.

WINTER GARDEN.
Mr. JACKSON has the honor to announce that, at the solicitation of his numerous friends,
MR. EDWIN BOOTH
has consented to appear on for the second time in New-York, in the character of CLAUDE MELNOTTE, in Sir Bulwer Lytton's play of
THE LADY OF LYONS.
All really great acting, which brands its mark on memory, is simply individual nature directed by mimetic art. When the individuality of the actor is unmitted to the character he portrays, the most cunning art cannot realize a perfect identification with nature. In no personation has this dramatic truth been more sensibly felt by the public than that of Claude Melnotte. The management therefore takes pride and pleasure in presenting in
MR. EDWIN BOOTH.
An artist whom Nature seems to have specially fitted for the part.
HIS YOUTH,
HIS GALLIC VIVIDNESS OF ILLUSTRATION,
And
THE FIRE and passion which glow throughout his style, combine to render him
A PERFECT IDEAL
Of the dramatist's conception. To give additional éclat to Mr. BOOTH'S appearance in this part, Mr. Jackson has pleasure also in announcing that he has engaged, especially for this occasion, that charming actress,
MRS. JULIA BENNETT BARROW,
Who will make her first appearance at this theatre as
PAULINE.

Union not Disunion.

CARD FROM ANSON WILLIS, ESQ.

To the Electors of the Sixth Congressional District:

My name has appeared several times in the public prints as an active member of a Union organization in the Sixteenth Ward, anterior to the meeting of the Convention at Syracuse on the 24th September last.

My object in acting with that organization was, not to put candidates in the field as a third party, but to cooperate with any party in an effort to procure the nomination of such men only as gave a hearty and unconditional support to the Administration in its efforts to crush out the rebellion, not caring whether the candidates were Republicans or Democrats. However, the State ticket nominated at Syracuse and, so far as I know, the entire approbation of the Union men. Since that time, however, some persons in this organization have put a candidate in the field for Congress, and also for member of Assembly. In this action I have not concurred, because it is an entire departure from what I believed to be the objects of the Union Association; it seems to me that its inevitable effects must be to disunite instead of uniting the supporters of the Administration; and instead of placing a third candidate in the field, it would be a cheaper and more direct way to have voted at once for the Democratic candidate, for, to support Mr. Blunt, is indirectly to support Mr. Ward.

I shall, therefore, support Mr. Conkling, because he has proved himself a faithful representative of the interests of this City, and a true and uncompromising supporter of the Administration. We know him and can trust him, if we can trust a living man.

I desire, Mr. Editor, to make this statement public, because I have been so often asked who I intended to support and asked by my friends my opinion as to whom they ought to vote for.

ANSON WILLIS.

The Sixth Congressional District.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: Seeing my name attached to a circular, and also in the TIMES of last Saturday morning, purporting to indorse OSMON BLUNT for member of Congress from this district, I would respectfully state, that being a member of that Convention, I attended the same, and voted for the Hon. FRANCIS A. CONKLING, but being in a minority, of course submitted to the nomination of Mr. BLUNT. But feeling it to be the duty of all Union-loving citizens to stand by the Administration at this time, and feeling confident that Mr. CONKLING is not only the strongest man of the two, as well as a decided Union man, and one who will stand by the President in all his great and glorious acts, I feel that I would be doing an act of injustice to the promptings of my own heart, were I to support, in the contest of to-morrow, any gentleman from this district, other than the Hon. FRANCIS A. CONKLING. By giving this a place in your columns you will very much oblige,

Yours, respectfully,

J. J. RABINEAU.

No. 103 BEDFORD-STREET—IXTH WARD, NEW-YORK, Nov. 3, 1862.

Gen. Wadsworth before his Constituents.

Gen. HIRAM WALBRIDGE is one of those who, in politics as well as all else, when he undertakes a work, rolls up his sleeves, goes into it, and does not cease until all is completed. His labors of Saturday, as a candidate for Congress, have already been reported. Yesterday morning he resumed his efforts at an early hour, and had not ceased in his out of door and in door demonstrations up to a late hour last evening, when our reporter left him. Delegations from the Democratic Clubs and of Democratic citizens were received by him at his residence during the whole of the morning, and his replies to all queries were such as satisfied the most fastidious as to the soundness of his democracy and his determination to uphold the honor and integrity of the Union and the Constitution. He was congratulated on his patriotism, as contrasted with the position of his opponent, Hon. BEN. WOOD, and as several of those who called on him and promised him their support, did so at the risk of losing the places they held under some of the Departments of the City Government controlled by Mr. WOOD's interest, the General promised all such as should lose their places employment in his own store until they could obtain situations elsewhere. He said, also, to the patriotic and loyal Democrats, that he should stand by their interests as he had always, and not turn his back upon them, as his opponent had done, when he thought because no loyal Democrat was opposed to him his success was certain. At 12 o'clock a procession of vehicles, filled with his Democratic constituents, accompanied by a band, made the circuit of the District, passing through the principal streets of the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Eighth Wards. The leading wagon, [illegible]

"Gen. WADSWORTH for the Sixth Congressional District."

All the wagons had over them the Stars and Stripes, and wherever the procession passed, crowds were gathered, appearing in every part of the district as high as thousands. Loud cheering greeted the General on his appearance, and speech after speech followed in rapid succession, in which he announced his determinacy to stand by him, who so long had supported the Government, and had stood by them in the political contests of the country in past years. No less than fifty speeches, of from two to five minutes' duration, were made during the seven hours that the procession was moving through the district. His remarks were varied to meet the different classes of citizens, but each speech contained the same sentiment—which was, that as a National Democrat he loyally sustained the Government and its Constitution and the flag which was the symbol of our glory and our power—that he stood by the Administration as the representative of the Government, so long as that Administration stood by the Constitution; that he opposed any man of doubtful loyalty, and he distinctly said the vote of any man whose loyalty was not as patent as to need no one to bolster it up; that the only speech that Ben. Wood has ever had attributed to him was one which he neither wrote nor delivered, but which had been printed and circulated here, and reprinted and circulated in the South, to ingratiate the rebels in their war against the Government, and by leading them to hope there was a divided sentiment in the North, to aid their efforts to accomplish the destruction of the Union; that he proposed to make no such speech; he did not merit the praises of the rebels, because it would be but a poor commentary on his loyalty. To the farmers and millers and stevedores he appealed to maintain the Government, because to acknowledge the Southern Confederacy was to cripple our commerce, and then their receipts would be lessened. To the laboring men he said, that with our Government destroyed, the great works of public improvement must diminish, because they could not go forward under guarantees of permanent order; he asked the mechanics to vote for him as representing the Constitution and Union, because they could have no guaranty of permanent employment if we were to have perpetual war, or if large markets for our manufactures articles were to be snatched from us. To the merchants he appealed, and they knew better than he could tell them how great their prosperity was under the Union and the Constitution. The Irish he asked to stand by the Government of their adoption, and not permit it to go down by the treachery of Northern men like Ben. Wood, and leave them with no greater security than existed in the land of their birth; to the Germans he appealed by their intuitive love of social order and justice, which our Constitution and Union so well conserved during three-quarters of a century, and which would yet, if the loyal Democrats of the North would show their strength, secure to them in the future, not to vote for a man who was willing to risk the Union, but above all selfish considerations he appealed to them as American citizens, by their love of liberty, the memories of the Revolution, and their patriotic devotion to the common good, to stand by him, as a loyal Democrat who loved the country of his birth, and was not willing to see it sacrificed by treachery.

The procession visited Mayor OPDYKE at the City Hall, where he (Mayor OPDYKE) met Gen. WADSWORTH for the first time since the Astor House, The Herald, Tribune, Evening Post, and Commercial Advertiser office, (where he requested that it might be announced on the bulletin that he held the declension of Mr. GUSSON, the Republican candidate, in his favor,) the Merchant's Exchange, the Washington Hotel, the Police headquarters, the Bank of Commonwealth, (where he expressed the hope that he might meet its President, Congressman HASKIN, on the floor of the next Congress, and with him to sustain the Government, the National War Committee, who received him with loud applause. At Tammany Hall the General made a brief appeal. He alluded to his associations with that temple of Democracy, and he asked that the Democrats who received their political education in that old edifice now stand by their brother-Democrat, and not sustain one whose hostility to the Union was the best evidence of his Democracy being spurious. He was loudly cheered by the Democrats gathered round the Old Wigwam.

Everywhere Gen. WALBRIDGE was welcomed by the people with prolonged demonstrations of favor, and as showing the unanimity of sentiment, it may be stated that during the whole course of the procession but a half dozen efforts were made to elicit cheers for Ben WOOD, and all these were but feebly responded to.

John Van Buren at Tammany Hall.

HOW GEN. SCOTT'S LETTER WAS OBTAINED.

In Tammany Hall, last evening, a large number of the Democracy gathered for the purpose of hearing Mr. JOHN VAN BUREN on the topic of the day. Mr. ELIJAH F. PURDY was elected Chairman, who, upon taking his seat beseeched those present not to be deterred from voting to-day by any threats that may be held out to them. He assured them that ample provision had been made to protect the Democratic electors; a Committee of Safety would be in attendance at Tammany Hall, and local Vigilance Committees would be on duty in every election district in the City, throughout the day. It was absolutely necessary, Mr. PURDY said, for the Democrats to exercise their right of suffrage—peaceably if possible, but forcibly if need be. In conclusion, the speaker exhorted all true Democrats to "Go early and vote." [A Voice—"Often!" Laughter and applause.]

It now being nearly an hour after the time Mr. VAN BUREN was announced to speak, the audience became somewhat impatient, and made loud and repeated calls for "VAN BUREN." To keep the crowd in good temper, Mr. PURDY proposed three cheers for SEYMOUR and three for the gallant CODZRAN, which was responded to heartily.

Mr. VAN BUREN, on being presented, spoke at some length, but said nothing either very fresh or new. He simply repeated, in many instances in precisely the same language, the speech he made some ten or twelve days ago in the Brooklyn Academy of Music. The only thing of interest alluded to, was how he obtained possession of Gen. SCOTT's letter to Mr. SEWARD. That letter, Mr. VAN BUREN said, had been read by Gen. SCOTT to JOHN C. HAMILTON and JAMES MONROE, and if the President had acted upon it, it would have been read to twenty millions of people, so he did not see that it could be properly called, as it had been, a private letter. Republicans had charged him with stealing the letter. A lady he had stated was helping him to keep the secret of how he got possession of it. When Mrs. LINCOLN visited this City some short time ago, he, thinking he ought to show some respect to the wife of the Chief Magistrate of the country, called upon her at the Metropolitan Hotel; she was not in, so he left his card. Before he got a hundred miles from the city, the fact of his having called upon Mrs. LINCOLN was chronicled in the papers. "Ah," said this and that person, "we know where you got that letter." "Do you?" asked Mr. VAN BUREN, "where?" "From Mrs. LINCOLN." This accusation was the cause of his now explaining how the letter came into his possession. When GEN. SCOTT wrote the letter, he kept the original draft, and sent to Mr. SEWARD a copy. Calling upon Gen. SCOTT one day, the General produced the letter, and showed it to Mr. VAN BUREN. After reading it, he asked Gen. SCOTT for a copy of it; he consented, and a copy was made by Mr. VAN BUREN's clerk. Subsequently, Mr. VAN BUREN asked Gen. SCOTT, as he had never given him anything in his life, to present him with that letter that he might keep it for the sake of the autograph. "He did so, and here it is," said Mr. VAN BUREN, producing the letter. [Applause and laughter.] "I intend to have it photographed by that excellent artist, Mr. BRADY, so you will all be enabled to get a copy."

At the conclusion of Mr. VAN BUREN's address, the meeting, after giving three cheers for SEYMOUR and VAN BUREN, dispersed.

Speech of Wm. Curtis Noyes.

At a meeting of the Twenty-first Ward Republican Union Association last evening, WM. CURTIS NOYES, Esq., was present, and spoke on the issue of the pending canvass. He drew a graphic contrast between the conduct of Gen. WADSWORTH and of HORATIO SEYMOUR in relation to the country since the war broke out; the one dedicating himself and fortune, all the energies of a generous and noble nature to the cause of his country; the other, who had received a military education (at FARMER'S Academy, Middletown,) and whose place should have been at the head of a corps d'armée, holding coldly and selfishly back lending no hand to help on the war, or to provide for those engaged in it, but devoting his influence and his time to the work of embarrassing the Administration, finding fault with every measure, exciting discontent at home, and affording sympathy to the rebels.

The peace that Mr. SEYMOUR and his party looked forward to was one which the North could not think of while a spark of patriotism or of self-respect was left; nor would it be a peace that would give to the country any quiet. When in Cincinnati lately, and seeing the intrenchments cast up beyond Covington Heights for the defense of that city, he could not help thinking that just such intrenchments would be constantly required along our extended borders did we acknowledge a separate Confederacy. Mr. SEYMOUR's conduct (said Mr. NOYES) does not appear to be loyal and true; and I say upon that subject, as Othello said upon the virtue of his wife,

"To doubt is to be resolved."

And when you doubt the loyalty of a man—when he acts in such a way as reasonably authorizes you to doubt, you should act as if you were resolved he was a traitor. [Applause.] I do not mean to say Gov. SEYMOUR is a traitor; I say no such thing; I have been represented as saying that; but I say when a man allows his loyalty to be doubted, and when he fails to come forward; when he cannot get certificates to show he was loyal, that man is to be doubted and treated as a traitor for the time being, until he repents and shows he is truly a loyal man.

Fifth Assembly District—Brooklyn.

The Tribune stated yesterday morning that Mr. PERRY was running as a stump candidate against Mr. SEYMOUR, the Republican nominee in this District. This is a mistake. Mr. PERRY was a candidate for the nomination, but his friends made the nomination [illegible]

[illegible] of Mr. SEYMOUR's friends, Gen. [illegible] working heavily to secure Mr. SEYMOUR's election. He only opposed in the Democratic convention, Mr. CALLOWAY, who was a member of the Infernal Legislature of 1861.

NEW-YORK.

GEN. WADSWORTH AND GEN. M'CLELLAN.

Senator HARRIS has written the following letter in reply to a note of inquiry from Hon. JONATHAN EDWARDS, of Troy:

ALBANY, Oct. 31, 1862.

MY DEAR SIR: Your note of yesterday is received. I take pleasure in complying with your request. Great injustice has been done Gen. WADSWORTH by the persevering efforts which have been made to have it believed that he is hostile to Gen. MCCLELLAN. My position in Washington and my intercourse with the parties, have been such as to enable me to speak with confidence in respect to the relations between these officers.

During the last year I have had repeated conversations with Gen. WADSWORTH upon the manner of conducting the war. Last Winter he was stationed with his brigade at Upton's Hill, in the very front of our army before Manassas. He was very anxious that the army should advance, and sometimes expressed impatience at the delay, but I have never heard him express anything like hostility to Gen. MCCLELLAN, or any want of confidence in his ability as a General, or his fidelity as a citizen. My intercourse with him has taken such that I am confident, if he had entertained any unfriendly feeling toward Gen. MCCLELLAN, I should have known it.

Like many others, Gen. WADSWORTH has sometimes expressed his impatience that the work of suppressing the rebellion did not progress more rapidly, but in no instance have I heard impeach the character or motives of other officers.

Since the war began, I have met with no man more thoroughly in earnest, or who seemed more ready to make personal sacrifices than Gen. WADSWORTH. During the whole of the last Winter he remained in his camp in Virginia.

He visited Washington very rarely—but in one instance, I think, remaining over night. His care of the soldiers under his command, was the subject of frequent remark. He was unremitting in his efforts to provide for their comfort and health. It was his practice to leave his tent at eight o'clock, in the most inclement weather, and pass through his entire encampment, to see that his orders in relation to ventilation and other sanitary measures, were observed. He exercised a paternal care over the men of his command. Instead of having them transferred to hospitals, he had them treated under his own supervision. I have heard it remarked, that no other brigade in the army had so few men unfit for duty by reason of sickness, as that of Gen. WADSWORTH'S.

Yours, with esteem,

IRA HARRIS.

Hon. JONATHAN EDWARDS, Troy.

DECLENSION OF HON. ALFRED ELY.

The Rochester papers publish a card from Hon. ALFRED ELY, giving the reasons for his withdrawal in favor of Hon. TRUMAN CLARKE. Mr. ELY says:

"I am appalled by the responsibility which would weigh me down, if any act of mine, not imperatively required by decent self-respect, should involve the election of an opposition member of the next Congress, from a district heretofore so reliable, intelligent and patriotic. No matter how respectable its nominee—no matter how personally loyal—his election would be hailed in Richmond as a triumph of those whom the rebels esteem their friends. However guiltless in intention, he would thus give substantial comfort to the enemy, and encourage their prolonged resistance.

The painful responsibility for such a result shall not be mine. I therefore withdraw from the canvass, and earnestly invoke for Mr. CLARKE the cordial and active support of all the electors of this District.

While I address this appeal to all without discrimination as to former political relations, I may be pardoned for urging it, especially upon those who were friendly to my nomination. I beg of those who have supported me so warmly up to this hour, not to separate themselves from me now.

Let them vindicate themselves, not only from the reproach, but from the suspicion of being indifferent or lukewarm to the success of the Union candidate. Let them show that in comparison with our righteous cause they hold all personal aspirations or private injuries as but dust in the balance. Let them, so far as it can depend upon their action, spare me the mortification of having sacrificed the honor of their support for naught, as I must do should Mr. CLARKE fail of an election through any fault of theirs."

NEW-JERSEY.

HON. H. WINTER DAVIS ON THE CONDUCT OF THE WAR.

Hon. HENRY WINTER DAVIS has been canvassing New-Jersey in behalf of the Union candidates. In a speech delivered at Newark, on Thursday evening he said:

"The nearest approach to a way conducted by Democrats is this one. [Laughter and cheers.] The Secretary of War is a Democrat, and the Generals placed in high positions are Democrats; and whether they have been successful, perhaps you can judge as well as I. [Laughter.] Their ideas of war perhaps vary a little from ours. They perhaps think they can carry on this war so as to secure the success of the Confederate States, and in that they are correct. [Loud applause.] They taunt you, with extraordinary audacity, to which I think you submit rather tamely, with having an opinion on the generalship of their Democratic Generals. [Laughter.] After the very great liberality of the President, who has passed over his political friends, and sought Democrats for the highest places, these men impudently claim that they alone are competent to conduct the war; and then, as if it were a decisive argument which no one could meet anywhere, they rush at Mr. WADSWORTH and others with eyes fairly starting, mouths open and spit fairly flying, and they say, "Oh, you are opposed to Gen. MCCLELLAN!" [great laughter and cheers;] and no man seems to say, "What if I am?" [Renewed laughter.] The President has placed him where he is; and when the President thinks that victory is the only true test of high command, and he sees fit to remove him from his command, he will do it, and we will support him in it. [Loud applause.] Yet they audaciously intimate that his army are so attached to him, that in such a case the army would rebel! We will tell him that there are men enough to whip his army and put down the rebellion after that. [Loud cheers.] And I will say on my own account, although it may not be very popular, that, in my judgment, SLOWNESS is not the way to prostrate this rebellion. [applause;] and say what you please of military science, I think the audacity of ZACHARY TAYLOR at Buena Vista, with all Mexican ignorance, would have stamped out this rebellion a year ago. [Loud applause.] There are men enough now, in and about Washington, if only let loose upon the enemy, to take them in their arms and carry them off. Let us thank God for any man, Democrat or Republican, who will lead us to victory." [Cheers.]

LETTER FROM HON. JOSEPH HOLT.

The following letter, from Hon. JOS. HOLT, was read at a meeting in Boston, which was addressed by Gov. ANDREW, Gen. BUTLER and others:

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Oct. 27, 1862.

Hon. William Claflin, Chairman of the Republican State Committee:

SIR: I am in receipt of your favor of 20th inst., inviting me, on behalf of the Republican State Committee, to address the citizens of Boston and its vicinity, at Faneuil Hall, "on the simple issue of loyalty to the National Government."

In view of the fearful tragedy in which the conspirators of the South have involved us, there could certainly be no grander theme for a popular discourse, or one more congenial to my heart. But my engagements here forbid that I should leave Washington, and I am therefore obliged to decline the kind invitation with which you have honored me.

I cannot believe, however, that the voice of a stranger is needed to stimulate the men who live amid the inspirations of Bunker Hill to do their duty and their whole duty to the country, in this dark hour of its trial and humiliation. No State has more glorious memories clustering about her history than Massachusetts, and they all speak of the granite foundations on which her devotion to the cause of human freedom has ever rested. Sure I am that the people of that noble old Commonwealth will, in the presence of a defiant and traitorous foe, do nothing, at the ballot-box, to impair the sublime power of the unconditional Unionism which their fathers and brothers and sons are proclaiming amid the carnage of the battle-field. Party politics may have its distractions and bewilderments, and many may be misled; but I think the conspirators whose guilty ambition is filling the land with new-made graves, will have to listen long before they hear aught to cheer them from the home of WARREN, of HANCOCK and of ADAMS.

Very respectfully, your obdt. servant,

J. HOLT.

A Card.

A STATEMENT OF FACTS RELATIVE TO THE SIXTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.

Mr. ORISON BLUNT was first nominated by citizens of the Fifteenth Ward, irrespective of party, on account of his known devotion to the Union, and because it seemed imperative that some one who was not a partisan should be brought forward, in order that all who desired to support the Government in this its hour of greatest need, might have a true Union Warriman to represent them in Congress.

At the meeting a Committee was appointed to meet delegations of citizens irrespective of party. The delegations from the three Wards composing the District met, and the result was the nomination of Mr. BLUNT by acclamation. Mr. BLUNT being waited upon by a Committee, and asked if he would accept the nomination, and run under any circumstances, replied that he would. Up to this time no other nomination for Congress had been made in the District, and it was supposed that this expression of feeling on the part of the people would have caused the adoption of Mr. BLUNT by the Republicans, he having always affiliated with that party. But notwithstanding Mr. BLUNT's nomination and acceptance, and his repeated det nination to run, notwithstanding he had been posted and advertised as such candidate, when the Republican Convention did meet, Mr. FRANCIS A. CONKLING was nominated—and immediately, in a lengthy speech, accepted the nomination, and declared his intention to run.

This being the condition of affairs, the meeting was had between Mr. BLUNT and Mr. CONKLING, and a portion of the State Central Committee, for the purpose of harmonizing the matter, and having but one Union war candidate in the District. At this meeting, Mr. CONKLING proposed to submit the matter to the gentlemen present. Mr. BLUNT replied that he did not feel authorized to do that, as they were not the parties who nominated him, but that he was willing to submit it to the Convention who nominated him, and abide by their decision; and that he would request that a Committee from that party should meet with these gentlemen.

These two Committees met on Wednesday last, at the United States District-Attorney's office, and after a session of three hours and a half, adjourned, without coming to any arrangement. Another Committee was appointed by the Republicans to meet Mr. BLUNT's friends, and another conference was held the next day at the Astor House, at which it was agreed that both Committees should report back to the parties appointing them, and meet the next day at 12 o'clock, at the same place, with power to act.

The friends of Mr. BLUNT were all present at the time named, and after waiting three-quarters of an hour without any appearance on the part of the Republican Committee, adjourned, and nothing has since been done in the matter.

J. C. CARY, Chairman.

JOHN W. MURRAY, Secretary.
